Roosevelt Tells Unions Not to Raid Each Other

Acts After A. F. L. Teamsters' Local Rebuffs Tobin And Joins C. I. O.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Informed that radical elements were attacking an A. F. of L. union which had expressed public support of the President's defense and labor program, Mr. Roosevelt yesterday added his voice to the Government's drive against subversive labor activity.

In what was interpreted as a direct warning to left-wing labor elements, Stephen Early, White House secretary, relayed to newspapermen the President's opinion that this was no time for unions to start "raiding each other" to get additional membership or for similar reasons.

The occasion of the President's statement was a report to him by Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Teamsters union (A.F. of L.), that his notorious "Trotskyite" Local 544, of Minneapolis, had seceded and was promptly granted a C. I. O. charter Thursday.

Radicals Active

Tobin also told the President, it was learned, that a deluge of radical organizers had descended on other branches of his international union—a move which he interpreted as retribution for his letter of June 5 to Mr. Roosevelt which the President later released as one of the finest tokens of support he had received from labor.

Local 544, of about 5,000 members, was granted a C. I. O. charter by A. D. Lewis, brother of John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers and former C. I. O. president. The application for C. I. O. membership followed a trial of the local's leaders last week on charges of extreme left-wing radicalism before the teamsters' executive board.

Informed of the President's comment, A. D. Lewis denied that his action in granting the charter constituted a raid.

"These workers came to us voluntarily and asked to be associated with an organization that can improve their economic position," he said. "We investigated their situation and decided to grant them a charter."

Lewis refused to discuss persistent reports that C. I. O. President Philip Murray, a friend of Tobin, had opposed granting the charter. He pointedly emphasized however, that as head of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, he was in an autonomous position and his organization's charter-granting activities were not subject to Murray's approval or veto.

Asked about the reported left-wing and "Trotskyite" leanings of the bolting teamsters' leaders, Lewis said, "The race, religion and color of the workers are their own business."

From Minneapolis, the Associated Press reported that the executive

Union Suspends 10 For Causing Walkout

Newark, N. J., June 13 (AP).—Amid shouts of "let's hang them right" and "drive out communism," members of Local 365, United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) tonight suspended ten members and ordered them tried on charges of instigating a 90-minute walkout at the Long Island City, N. Y., plant of the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, busy on defense orders for fighter planes.

50% Slash Asked in Auto Production

War Department's Request Seeks to Free Plants for Defense

By W. H. Lawrence.

A reduction in automobile production of as much as 50 per cent has been asked by the War Department to release men, materials and management for the more urgent task of turning out airplanes, tanks and other implements of war for the United States, Great Britain and her Allies.

The request was made by Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson in a letter to William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, several days ago.

Knudsen yesterday declined to make public the letter and it was not known whether he had given Patterson a definite answer to his proposal.

OPM has ordered an "initial" cut of 20 per cent in automobile output, effective August 1, when the new models go into production. In the meantime, automobile factories have been turning out more cars than in any year in history except 1929.

Persons close to Knudsen expressed doubt that any automobile production cut as drastic as 50 per cent would be ordered

2 Md. U. Students Killed in Crash

Two Maryland University students were killed and two others were injured early yesterday when their auto collided with a lumber truck on Route 240 near Hendersons Corner, Md. A fifth person, helper on the truck, was injured slightly.

The driver of the truck was charged with manslaughter and released on $2,500 bond for appearance later in Rockville police court.

Crash Killing Byron Laid to Flight Captain

Failure to Check Altimeters Blamed For Flying Too Low

Failure of the pilots to check the altimeters and thus observe errors in the readings of one or both of the instruments was the apparent cause of the crash of an Eastern Air Lines plane last February 27 near Atlanta, Ga., which killed Representative William D. Byron, of Maryland, and seven others, and seriously injured Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president of Eastern.

One altimeter was used for route flying and the other for landing.

A report of the Civil Aeronautics Board, headed by Harllee Branch, chairman, said yesterday, after exhaustive study, that probable cause of the crash was failure of the flight captain of the plane to check his altimeters to determine whether they were set correctly. The board also found that a contributing factor in the accident was the absence of an established procedure on Eastern Air Lines by which both the captain and pilot are required to make a check of the altimeters during landing operations.

Engines Functioning Normally

The investigation found that the plane's engines and all of its equipment, with the exception of the altimeters, were functioning normally until the crash.

In the wreckage were found two altimeters which had been torn from the instrument panel and lay partially buried in mud. An examination of the barometric scale setting of the altimeter the pilot should have used in landing was off .98 of an inch from that given by the radio operator at Atlanta. When found, the altimeter read 29.92. It should have been set at 28.94, which makes a difference of approximately 900 feet in altitude. The second altimeter used in route flying was also misset. It showed a setting of

Mrs. Mary Hawes Spahn, 50, died last night while saving her 15-month-old granddaughter, Sandra Holmes, from injury in a fall from the back porch of the child's home at 1611 R Street Southeast.

Toppling backward through a weak railing with the baby in her arms, Mrs. Spahn landed on her back on a concrete areaway. She died a few minutes later.

The baby, clasped closely to the grandmother's breast, was unhurt physicians called to the scene said.

Sandra is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Holmes. Holmes, a Navy Yard worker, is Mrs. Spahn's son by a former marriage. Both parents of the child were inside the house at the time of the accident. Hearing a scream they ran out and frantically reached their child and mother.

Ralph Hamilton, 38, also a Navy Yard worker, of 1613 Ridge Place Southeast, witnessed the tragedy from a parked car at the rear of the lot. Dashing to the side of the pair he found Mrs. Spahn still breathing, he said. Then he called a doctor.

Dr. Russell K. Hollingsworth, who has a clinic nearby, responded immediately, but found Mrs. Spahn dead. He, and other doctors called in by neighbors, examined the baby. She was unhurt, having fallen on top of her grandmother.

Holmes said they had just finished the evening meal, and that Mrs. Spahn had taken the baby out on the narrow porchway for some air

House Delays D. C. Budget Till Monday

$52,547,081 Bill Will Pass if Session Must Last 'All Night,' Rep. Mahon Promises

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The House last night put off until Monday the debate on a record District appropriation bill of $52,547,081, leaving Congress just 16 days to rush the measure into law before expiration of this fiscal year.

To save time and to avoid a possible financial crisis, Chairman George H. Mahon of the District Appropriations Subcommittee said he would ask Senate leaders to depart from the usual practice and start hearings while the bill is still under consideration on the House floor.

Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the subcommittee that will handle the measure in the Senate, indicated, however, that the suggested procedure could not be followed.

The full Appropriations Committee reported the bill to the House yesterday, but after a prolonged controversy over the relief bill, Mahon told weary members that much as he wanted to hurry the bill to the Senate he felt constrained to postpone action over the weekend.

House leaders agreed that on Monday debate on the bill would be limited to an hour and a half and Mahon promised to pass the measure "if I have to ask them to stay in session all night."

From total estimates of $53,598,581, the committee cut $1,051,500, largely by reducing requests for construction expenditures which District officials considered essential to keep the city apace with the expansion brought on by the defense program.

Total appropriations carried in the measure, however, were $2,069,446 above the District's budget for this fiscal year.

$828,030 Surplus Expected

The House was told by the committee that from general fund revenues—budget total, less highway and water department items—a surplus of $828,030 can be expected. Highway revenues, as estimated, were $286,178 above items approved. Thus the measure was written to give the District a "cushion" of more than $1,000,000 to meet unanticipated demands for expenditures.

The bill put the Federal payment at $6,000,000—the same as the amount provided for the expiring fiscal year—but before the measure reached the House a move was launched to boost the contribution to $7,500,000.

Hinges on New Taxes

Outcome of the drive was dependent upon two factors: One, ability of the District Commissioners to convince the Appropriation Subcommittee that an additional $7,832,878 is needed for "must" capital improvements to pull the city through the defense emergency; and,

Two, enactment of legislation to give the city $4,500,000 additional tax revenues by increasing gasoline and realty levies.

Included in the budget total, but

Agencies' Parley On Penny Milk Is Urged by SMA

The Surplus Marketing Administration has recommended to District school officials that representatives of District and Federal agencies be called to discuss the proposed penny milk for Washington's needy school children.

The proposal was made in a letter from O. M. Reed, chief of the S. M. A. dairy division, to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District Schools.

School officials said Reed outlined the various problem incident to setting up penny milk distribution. The Federally subsidized program would make half-pint bottles of milk available to several thousand undernourished Washington children at a penny a bottle.

Income Tax Study Is Held Up

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday unexpectedly deferred further work on new income tax schedules until an agreement has been reached on new excess profits tax rates.

Postponement came as the committee was ready to decide on a compromise schedule of surtaxes, allowing existing exemptions and credits but starting taxes on the first dollar of taxable income.

France Fights Hitler's Battle In Syria, Says Hull; Germany To Be Warned in Ship Sinking

Firm Note Being Prepared, but No Warlike Action Is Contemplated

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Undaunted by a German threat to sink "any ship with contraband for England," the United States grimly branded Germany a treaty violator yesterday and prepared a firm note of protest against the sinking of the American freighter Robin Moor, demanding payment for damages and warning the Nazis against any further violations of "freedom of the seas."

The United States will not take warlike measures against Germany because of the Robin Moor case, a high authority told The Post.

The sinking of the 5,000-ton ship, which survivors said was sent to the bottom May 21, in the south Atlantic by a German submarine, will be vigorously protested and then allowed to become part of the record—part of the American case against Nazi Germany.

Informed officials view the loss of the vessel, with 35 of 48 persons aboard still missing, as one of the risks the United States must take in carrying out its policies of all-out aid to Britain and "freedom of the seas."

Moreover, it was predicted authoritatively that the Robin Moor is only the first of a number of American ships that will be sunk by Germany. It was pointed out that 28 such were sunk, with a loss of 70 lives, before the United States entered the World War.

An authorized German source in Berlin placed the United States on notice yesterday that:

"Whenever any ship with contraband sails for England we'll shoot at it, whether it is the Robin Moor, the Exmoor (the vessel's former name) or anything else."

Germany "won't be buffaloed by American or English discussions concerning the Robin Moor," this source declared, according to the Associated Press.

The American answer to this threat was a charge by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles that Germany, in sinking the Robin Moor, has violated a treaty of 1930 that prescribed rules of naval warfare.

Contraband Argument Out

The United States firmly stands on the fact, said Welles at a press conference, that Germany, the United States and Great Britain have all adhered to the London Naval Treaty of 1930.

This treaty required that when a war vessel sinks a merchant ship the crew and passengers must be put in "a place of safety." Lifeboats, where the Robin Moor's passengers were placed, are not regarded as a "place of safety" by the treaty unless there is land or a recue vessel nearby. The Robin Moor crew and passengers were set

U. S. Drive Planned For Pots and Pans To Build Planes

New York, June 13 (AP).—Plans for a national campaign to salvage 20,000,000 pounds of aluminum from kitchen pots and pans and other scrap metal sources were announced today by Frank Bane, director of the division of state and local cooperation of the office of civilian defense.

Bane revealed the program in an address to defense representatives from 12 northeastern states at a conference here. A resolution was adopted by the 75 officials pledging support for the drive.

The metal would be sufficient for 650 long-range bombers or 4,000 fighter planes, Bane estimated.

In test drives conducted recently in four counties in Virginia and Wisconsin, 80,000 pounds were collected, four times the total expected by defense officials, Bane asserted.

Ernest Hemingway Says:

Japan Can Never Defeat China As Long as U. S. Continues Aid

By Ernest Hemingway
Copyright 1941 PM, Inc.

RANGOON—Japan has temporarily lost her chance of making peace with China.

The second thing you can truly count on in the Far East is that Japan can never conquer China.

The simplest way to explain the present military stalemate is to point out that Japan has conquered all of the flat country where her superiority in planes, artillery and mechanized formations has given her a tremendous advantage and she must now fight the Chinese in mountain country, much of it roadless, where the Chinese meet the Japanese on more equal terms. The Chinese have an enormous army of 200 first line divisions (over 2,000,000 men) who are exceedingly well armed for the type of war they are fighting now. They also have another million men in not so good divisions, they have three Communist divisions, and probably half a million Communist irregulars who are trained in a guerilla warfare.

China has ample supplies of rifles, plenty of ammunition, excellent heavy and light machine guns and automatic rifles and ample supplies of ammunition manufacturered in Chinese arsenals for all of these arms. Each Chinese battalion has a mortar company of six 81 millimeter mortars which are extremely accurate at 2,000 yards and have an extreme range of 3,000. This is not hearsay. I saw them used many times at the front and they were excellent weapons used with great skill.

This 81 millimeter mortar is the French Brandt and the Chinese can drop a shell with it on a set of diapers at 2,000 yards, and in the mountains it makes up enormously for their lack of artillery. They are also building a mortar of their own of 82 millimeters copied almost exactly from the Brandt. It is practically as accurate but a couple of hundred yards shorter in its extreme range.

In the regular divisions the discipline is of the extremest Prussian

Vessel Is Damaged

By the Associated Press

London, June 13.—Britain announced tonight that one of Germany's dwindling supply of the heavily gunned but lightly armored pocket battleships was torpedoed by British airmen off the southern coast of Norway early today and informed sources said she was probably badly damaged.

"They must have been taken completely by surprise," declared one of the attacking pilots.

Just 18 days after fliers closed in with British surface vessels to sink the Bismarck, 35,000-ton pride of the Nazi navy, coastal command aircraft struck the fresh blow.

A long-range, twin-engined Beaufort swept low around the stern of one of five screening Nazi destroyers, British sources said, to ram home the explosive amidships as the Germans headed northward—apparently raiding bent—past Egersund. Another torpedo quickly followed.

Retires at Slow Pace

"Dense clouds of white smoke rose from the vessel," the air ministry said, reporting the smoke was so thick that the crews of succeeding planes in the assault were unable to observe the results of their own work accurately.

"Soon after 10 o'clock this morning, the battleship was stationary some miles off Mandel, on the most southern point of Norway, and later

Soviet Assumes Nazis at Border Are No Threat

Admits Troop Massing; Germans Show Blitz Film to Red Officers

By the Associated Press

Moscow, June 13.—The Soviet government announced tonight that German troops were moving toward Russia's frontier, but denied that Berlin had made any new demands upon Moscow and denied also that the Soviet Union was preparing to fight Germany.

While this announcement was made in a long, carefully worded statement, Germany military attaches showed their famed blitzkrieg motion pictures to officers of the Red army at a private exhibition.

In taking cognizance of rumors abroad that Russia and Germany might be approaching war, the Soviet statement said that "it should be assumed" that the German troop movements had no bearing on Russian-German relations. Statements regarding Germany's intentions in other matters were surrounded with similar qualifying phrases.

The blitzkrieg motion pictures, two reels showing the Nazi military campaigns in the Balkans and in Africa, were shown at the former Austrian legation before the diplo-

Much Ado About Nothing

4,500 at Walkathon Thrown Into Panic by Police Riot Call

A bunch of the boys and girls were whooping it up at the Riverside Stadium, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest, last night in the Australian sprint, the evening feature of the walkathon which has been in progress there since April 14.

Three and a half couples were in the finals of the sprint. One of the contestants began to tire and a judge slapped him on the back in an effort to revive him. Then without warning, the air was filled with the screaming of police sirens.

Approximately 4,500 spectators were thrown into panic. Someone had put in a riot call to police headquarters.

Scout cars dispatched to the scene included numbers 71, 72, 31, 32, 11; and motorcycle police from the following precincts: 1, 3, 7, 8, 13 and 2. Police reserves also were sent.

Automobile traffic in the area was paralyzed and thousands of persons attracted by the sirens, gathered at the scene. But, when the police arrived they were told that someone got excited during the 25-minute sprint grind and sent in the alarm. No one was arrested and quiet was soon restored.

At 10:13 the police radio dispatcher announced that "the situation is well in hand."

Meanwhile, the show went on.

A few minutes before, police received another riot call from the 1200 block Wylie Street Northeast. Scout cars 91, 92, 21 and 12, and motorcycle police from the Fifth, Ninth and Twelfth Precincts responded. However, there was no serious trouble.

Plea Made to People To Resist Becoming Tool of Nazis; Envoy Here 'Disappointed'

The United States last night charged France with fighting Germany's battles in Syria and declared that the Darlan-Laval clique of the Vichy government will turn France into a tool of Hitler unless the French people make an eleventh-hour resistance.

This formal charge was made by Secretary of State Hull in another desperate effort to keep the Vichy government out of Germany's clutches.

If the effort ends in failure, it has been widely predicted, the United States will treat France, its traditional friend, as an enemy for the first time since the sea skirmishes of the Napoleonic era.

French Ambassador Gaston Henri-Haye last night declared in a statement that he was surprised and disappointed "at the new interpretation given by the Secretary of State" of the events taking place in the Near East.

Second Warning in Week

Hull issued his second warning within a week to the men of Vichy, appealing over their heads to the French people not to accept this "preposterous status" of fealty to the Nazi Fuehrer.

While on June 5 Hull had merely reminded France of this country's previous acts of friendship for her, last night he set forth the following list of charges:

1. That France went far beyond the terms of its armistice with Germany by allowing German forces to use Syria as a base for an attack on British forces in Iraq.

2. That the Vichy French forces in Syria actually sent some of their French war material from Syria to be used by Germany against the British.

3. That by these actions France is "permitting if not abetting" a German master plan to use Syria in a drive to invade Iraq, Egypt, the Suez Canal area and Africa

"In Hope of Securing Favor"

4. That by resisting the British occupation of Syria the Vichy government has set "Frenchmen against Frenchmen."

5. That in France the clique of Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan and of Pierre Laval, by their own public statements, are trying to get the French people to transfer their allegiance to Hitler "in the hope of securing his personal favor."

Cautioning that Hitler can not be depended upon to obey any rules, Hull asked France not to "prostrate" herself before him.

"Germany seems to have prevailed on the Vichy government to do Germany's fighting in the Syria area of the general German advance," he declared.

"Deepest . . . Sorrow"

The full text of Hull's statement, issued as in response to inquiries, follows:

"From the standpoint of the French people, and others who have a love for freedom, and have freedom, the attitude of the present government of Vichy is a matter of the deepest disappointment and sorrow.

"The original scheme of the Darlan-Laval group to deliver France politically, economically, socially, and militarily to Hitler seems now to have been brought out into the open by a succession of public statements by French authorities and especially those by Messrs. Laval and Darlan.

"When Germany recently desired

ZORRO RIDES AGAIN!

Did you see the movie, "The Mark of Zorro?" Or did you read Johnston McCulley's book on which the movie was based? If so, you'll be delighted to learn that tomorrow's complete novel in The Sunday Post is a sequel, "The Sign of Zorro."

Here are romance, color and adventure aplenty! For romance, the growing love of the beautiful senorita for the outlaw, Zorro, conflicting with her promise to marry the well-born but lackadaisical Don Diego. For color, the life of California in the old Spanish days. For adventure, Zorro's brushes with the law, his duels with mortal enemies, his many escapes from danger. And for climax the final duel scene in which the triumphant and pardoned Zorro is revealed to be the supposed weakling, Don Diego!

Plot and counterplot, beautiful girls and treacherous villains, plenty of swordplay—what more could any reader want?

Vichy Fights Hitler's Battle, Hull Says

to make use of Syria to attack British forces in Iraq no objection, much less resistance, to this action was made by France, although the terms of the armistice between France to be used as a base for Germany that France permit territory under French control outside occupied France to be use as a base for German military operations, and Marshal Petain declared as recently as a few weeks ago that he would not permit such use. The use of Syria is a vitally important part of the general plan of Hitler's to invade Iraq, Egypt, the canal area, and Africa. When the French authorities in Syria, acting under the Vichy government, made no effort to prevent German use of Syria as a military base, and when they permitted even the shipment from Syria of military supplies of French manufacture to be used by the Germans against France's former ally, they permitted Germany to extend the theater of war into French-mandated territory.

Frenchmen Against Frenchmen

To resist this further expansion of German aggression the British forces in the Near East entered Syria to prevent German actions there which the French, under the direction of the Vichy government were permitting if not abetting. Yet the French authorities in Syria have considered it necessary to contest bitterly this British effort to prevent Syria from being used as a German base. These facts unmistakably demonstrate that the German military effort is making use of France and that the German initiative in Syria is resulting in a conflict, not only of France against Britain but of Frenchmen against Frenchmen. Germany seems to have prevailed on the Vichy government to do Germany's fighting in the Syria area of the general German advance.

"But aside from the situation in Syria, and considering the broader aspects of Franco-German collaboration, the public statements of the Darlan-Laval element demonstrate that the people of France are expected not only to surrender permanently and unconditionally their loyalty to all French traditions, institutions, liberties, interests, culture, and the entire way of life which made France great, but actually to transfer all of these loyalties—all hope of the future—to Hitler in the hope of securing his personal favor. The general adoption of Hitlerism would set the world back five to ten centuries.

"In a statement on June 10, Admiral Darlan, vice premier of France, urged the French people to conquer their illusions and consent to sacrifices and indicated that France would be utterly destroyed unless the French people should take this unprecedented and revolutionary action.

"Unless a military invader is devoid of all human attributes he extends to the conquered all of those considerations and recognitions contemplated by the rules and principles of civilized society. An armistice signifies a temporary cessation of hostilities between the parties to it. It does not contemplate that the successful belligerent shall make inhuman demands upon the country and people of the defeated belligerent nor does it contemplate that they shall be bludgeoned into becoming allies of their enemy. If, therefore, Hitler cannot be depended upon, as implied by Darlan's statement, to observe such rules and laws in dealing with the conquered, how much less can he be depended upon to show the least consideration in these vital respects should the conquered peoples prostrate themselves before him and bestow upon him unrestricted license to deal as he may see fit with their lives, their liberties, and their entire future welfare.

"It remains to be seen whether the French people accept this preposterous status and thus pave the way for them to find themselves assisting Hitler as his co-belligerents in his desperate effort to conquer Great Britain and secure control of the high seas.

"In the prevention of such a possibility, both the French people and the people of the United States have a common interest of tremendous importance to the future."

Envoy "Surprised"

The French Ambassador's statement said:

"I can only express my surprised disappointment at the new interpretation given by the Secretary of State of the events now taking place in the French-mandated territory of the Near East.

"From the official communiques issued by the British forces which have invaded Syria and Lebanon it appears clearly that no land, naval or air forces belonging to the Axis powers have been encountered.

"Moreover, the French government has reaffirmed, over and over again, that our armies were alone to assure the defense of the territories placed under French protection.

"French, Lebanese, Syria and empire soldiers, who are fighting with heroic abnegation, are fighting for a France they love all the more since their ever proud country is now, in spite of her distress, facing a new attack.

Unprecedented Task

"It is precisely, in order to keep up French traditions and all that they stand for in the world, that our soldiers are once more generously shedding their blood after so many sacrifices already consented. Furthermore, they defend countries where ever since the remote times of the Crusades, French language and culture have been closely associated with the life of their inhabitants.

"The leaders who are now devoting themselves to the task—unprecedented in our history—to bring about the resurrection of the French nation and to protect the populations of her empire, know better than anyone else, where their duty lies. Many times they have pledged themselves to accomplish it with honor.

"It is quite unnecessary to wait any longer to see that the people of France are following the course decided upon by the government of Marshal Petain. Frenchmen stand united behind the leader whom they worship because his long life is a life of righteousness which has always been inspired by the purest patriotism."

French Attache Resigns

Shortly before Hull issued his rebuke to the Vichy government, Herve Alphand, financial attache of the French Embassy here and one of France's leading trade treaty experts, resigned his post because he finds himself in disaccord with the general policies of the Vichy regime.

Alphand, scion of a family of famous French diplomats, was assigned here last July as financial attache. Formerly he was inspector of finances and director of commercial bureaus of the ministry of commerce.

He was in New York last night and no comment was forthcoming either from him nor the embassy.

It was noteworthy that the Hull statement made no attack against Marshal Henri Petain, venerable head of the French state who is generally held in great affection by Frenchmen.

The State Department, it was said, has been led to believe that Petain shares the American viewpoint, but that perhaps due to his age and his position in France he has not been able to gain the upper hand over the Darlan-Laval group.

The Hull statement made no mention either of Marshal Maxime Weygand, commander of French North African forces, who has been reported as pitted with Petain against the Darlan-Laval group in a fight to enforce strict observance of the armistice.

Hitler May Be Negotiating For French Fleet

By Rear Adm. Yates Stirling, jr.
(U. S. N. Retired)

Copyright by United Press.

A separate French peace with Germany, which Admiral Darlan may be negotiating, should alarm the British, because of the French military and naval aid which Berlin might demand.

France is a conquered nation and hardly could expect a peace that would take its navy, naval bases, and air force out of Hitler's grasp.

And France today is fighting against the British in Syria.

Germany so far avows that this fight is not her immediate concern, yet German airplanes are in Syria and should the British dig in there, the German Luftwaffe hardly would hold its hand.

That might create a situation in which French naval weight would be thrown against the British navy in the Mediterranean.

War against Britain appears to be the price Admiral Darlan would pay to escape the results of France's defeat by Germany.

The French navy would be a formidable foe to the weakened British navy in the Mediterranean, and in addition to the Italian navy, would give the preponderance of naval strength to the Axis, in that closed sea.

The French warships constitute a most formidable array and are said to be in condition for service and fully manned.

The President's Day

By International News Service

JINX: Friday the thirteenth jinxed the President back into bed yesterday with what was described as a "light head cold." All appointments were canceled but that didn't stop Mr. Roosevelt, who kept Secretaries General Watson and Steve Early hopping, dictated Missy Lehand into a full day's work.

FOOTFALL: But over in the Executive offices the only sound was an occasional footfall padding exitward as most of the secretariat took advantage of the lull to take care of such long-neglected chores, as shopping, hair-dos, etc.

RECORD: The President's absence from his office, the bad-luck day and the steamy rain combined to hang up something of an all-time high in White House records—not a single petition, delegation, sightseer or crank passed the portals. The Secret Service men lolled comfortably in the outer lobby chairs, the press room was empty by early afternoon. The day dragged slowly to a 4:30 p. m. "Lid" and most of the offices were emptied shortly thereafter.

REMEDY: A day in bed, light diet of soups, chicken, eggs, melba toast and quarts of fruit juice were expected to polish off the Presidential cold but no one expected him to be back at his desk today. Saturday is a half-day and the staff took it for granted he wouldn't bother to come over.

HAMMERING: Slightly annoying to White House ushers and occupants was the energetic noise of a big carpentry job going on in the east room—from 9 to 5 workmen worked diligently at tearing up the worn old floor, moving in parquet blocks for the new one.

Union Splits; Some Mills to Open

Seattle, June 13.—The western Washington C. I. O. lumber strike front cracked and buckled today as the three largest union locals prepared to return to work Monday under a National Defense Mediation Board formula.

The proposal, calling for 7½-cent an hour wage increases and vacations with pay, has been rejected by leaders of the International Woodworkers of America and a delegates' conference called by them.

The management of the big Weyerhaeuser mills at Everett reported operations would be resumed Monday following the union membership's favorable vote last weekend. The mills employ close to 1,300.

The company's camps at Vail and McDonald in southwestern Washington also will open.

Another major defection came on the Northern Olympia Peninsula, where operators and union local No. 90 announced a back-to-work agreement.

The decision of local No. 90 involves 2,000 members in four logging companies' operations on the peninsula.

At Lyman, Secretary Clifford Ramey said the local voted, 129 to 74, to return to work.

One local, at Anacortes, has reported a favorable vote on the recommendations of the I. W. A. leadership to continue the strike.

The union shop and elimination of piece work were the I.W.A. demands which were not met, although operators agreed to recommend that all employes join the union.

The conditions set forth by the Mediation Board would be applicable until a final adjustment were made after a survey, under board auspices, of the industry. Hourly wages at present start at 67½ cents.

U. S. Will Send Firm Note to Germany

adrift in lifeboats about halfway between Africa and South America. Three of the ship's four lifeboats are still missing.

Welles refused to get into an argument with the German spokesman over what constitutes contraband and it was indicated that this question would not play an important part in the American protest.

Owners of the Robin Moor yesterday made available her manifest, which showed that she carried 5,263 tons of cargo consisting of several thousand items ranging from brassieres to steel rails.

The Robin Line called a press conference in New York to "let the people know the ship did not carry munitions or other materials of war."

The only firearms listed in the manifest were one case of .22-caliber rifles without ammunition and 10 cases of low-gauge shotgun shells consigned to a sporting goods store in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Supporting a statement by Welles Thursday that the ship was not headed for the war zone, the line officials said, the Associated Press reported, the nearest port the ship was to touch near the Red Sea was Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, 3,000 miles from the Red Sea.

Caried Rails, Nazis Say

The German attitude, as expressed in Berlin, was that if the ship had contraband intended for England it was fair game for any German warship, the Associated Press said.

The Nazi spokesman said in this connection:

"So far, all presumably factual statements are from British and American quarters. But if the facts as presented by these interested quarters are correct there were railroad rails aboard the Robin Moor. The British have declared rails to be unconditional contraband and in these matters we invariably adopt the British practice. What's contraband to them is contraband to us. The British are traditionally disposed to make the conception of contraband wider than we are inclined to do."

Welles pointed out yesterday that the United States never acquiesced officially in the determination of contraband issued either by the British government in September, 1939, or subsequently by the German government.

Germany lists as unconditional contraband—goods which in the Nazi conception can be destroyed or confiscated without formality—everything recognized by international law, such as munitions, chemicals, guns, fuel, war vessels, airplanes and airplane parts and innumerable other items intended for use in battle.

In addition, the Nazi Reich lists many goods as conditional contraband, if intended for enemy territory or enemy forces.

The German list of conditional contraband includes: Foodstuffs, live animals, clothing and raw materials used for their manufacture, war trucks, signal communication and apparatus, transport and communication equipment and parts, horses for riding and pulling loads, lubricants and tools, instruments and machines used to make or to use the above proucts.

President Roosevelt, confined to his living quarters by a sore throat, will not have any statement to make on the Robin Moor until after he examines the full report of United States Consul Walter J. Linthicum, who interviewed the 11 survivors at Pernambuco, Brazil. Linthicum's full report, supplementing versions he telegraphed Thursday, is expected to arrive by airmail Monday.

Some quarters expected vigorous American action to protect shipping, such as by arming all merchant ships, but informed officials said to do this would only be to invite more German attacks on peaceful American commerce.

Indicating the nature of the American protest, Welles said further that the United States stands on President Roosevelt's recent reaffirmation of the "ancient American doctrine of freedom of the seas."

Search for Boats Urged

The Navy Department yesterday asked vessels in the area where the Robin Moor was sunk to search for the three missing boats.

Late yesterday the State Department accepted an offer of Louis Patem, executive vice president of the Mississippi Shipping Co., to bring the 11 survivors to New Orleans from Recife aboard his firm's ship, the Deltargentina, which left Rio de Janeiro Thursday night. The Deltargentina will stop at Pernambuco Sunday night, pick up the survivors, and is expected to arrive with them in New Orleans, June 25.

Proposed Bill Would Limit Industry Draft

Legislation, in sharp conflict with the Senate-passed Connally bill, omitting condemnation of defense strikes and limiting Government control of struck plants, yesterday was taking form in the House Military Affairs Committee.

Approving changes to assure Army "protection" of men returning to work, but continuing plant management in private hands, the committee postponed final action until Monday.

Other amendments empowered the President to take over where the management of a strikebound plant refused to utilize Federal conciliation or mediation machinery. The committee provided such a refusal be construed as a failure to cooperate with the Government under section 9 of the draft law.

In sharpest collision with the Senate bill was the amendment by Representative Harness (Republican), of Indiana, which would keep plants under private management when the Army intervened to protect workers returning to work through picket lines.

It provided:

"The President shall have the power through the heads of the War and Navy Departments, to use the armed forces of the United States to afford protection to all persons engaged in the operation of such plant or industry, who voluntarily desire to work in such plant or industry."

Virtually none of the language of the Connally amendment had been included in the House bill when the committee stopped work yesterday, but Chairman May said the bill will still be open to amendment Monday.

Survivor Tells How Germans Sank U. S. Ship

By the Associated Press

Recife, Brazil, June 13.—A German officer of the submarine which sank the United States freighter Robin Moor seemed particularly interested in automobiles which the vessel carried, one of the Robin Moor crew told the Associated Press tonight.

Further, this officer told the first officer of the Robin Moor that "we are very sorry, but you are carrying cargo bound for a country which is fighting us," William Cary, of Delmar (Albany County), N. Y., said.

The Robin Moor was headed for Capetown, Union of South Africa, when she was halted and sunk after the crew and passengers had been ordered into their boats.

Cary, one of 11 survivors of the American freighter, gave this account of what happened after his ship was halted in the South Atlantic on the morning of May 21.

Got Signal to Stop

"We were ordered to halt by light signals. The first officer and two crewmen of the Robin Moor got into a lifeboat and rowed to the submarine.

"A German officer on the tower asked in bad English what cargo we were carrying and our destination. The first officer answered clearly.

"The German officer went below and returned two minutes later and said: 'We are very sorry but you are carrying cargo bound for a country which is fighting us.'

"The officer ordered us to leave the ship within 20 minutes. When all had abandoned the ship the submarine shot a torpedo just in front of midships and fired some shots from a cannon.

"I believe the Germans were particularly interested in the big quantity of automobiles which lined the deck.

Child is Courageous

"Most pitiful were the women and a 4-year-old boy. The child was very courageous.

"The lifeboats sailed together for five and a half days. We could see the courage of the women. Our boat was the fastest and on the sixth day when the captain gave the order to spread out we left the others behind.

"The captain said the chances of finding some ship were better if we scattered.

"We headed for the rocks of St. Peter and St. Paul. We had a little barrel of water, insufficient for many days. We would have died of thirst but for the rains. We caught rain water on the sail and made it run into the barrel.

"One German sailor gave us a gallon can containing pressed black bread, but it was so hard we couldn't eat it.

"On the tenth day of the voyage, at 11 a. m., we sighted a ship and lit a signal fire, but they did not see us.

Nazis Seized Radio

"During the horrible voyage we sang and joked as much as possible, trying to keep our morale high until the Ozorio found us."

Another survivor declared that armed German seamen occupied the Robin Moor and seized her radio to prevent her from flashing an SOS before a torpedo from a German submarine sent her to the bottom.

He said there was no trace of panic as the ship's company, men, women and one child, took to the lifeboats. He expressed special admiration for the child, a fearess 4-year-old boy, in the same lifeboat with the women.

(There has been no word of three of the four lifeboats with 35 other persons.)

The narrator, who remained anonymous, said: "We had to ration our food closely. Sometimes we all despaired of ever reaching safety.

"It was worst at night. We rowed 19 days. I'll never forget those awful days and nights.

"We almost went crazy with joy when we saw the Ozorio and began to live again for we all had been practically convinced we were dead men."

Japan Expected To Continue Dutch East Indies Talks

Tokyo, June 13 (AP).—The cabinet approved today instructions to Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japan's envoy in the stalemated economic negotiations with the Netherlands East Indies, and indications were that he would be directed to parley further.

The government spokesman intimated a "recommendation" that Yoshizawa return to Japan, but in Batavia, scene of the negotiations, the envoy showed no haste to depart.

Interviewed by telephone by the Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi, Yoshizawa said he had made "tentative reservations" on a Japanese liner sailing for home June 29, but this would not be definite until he had seen Tokyo's instructions.

The trip, started June 9, took him to Casablanca, Dakar and Rabat.

The dead:

William Craig Diamond, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs Douglas Diamond, of Gaithersburg, Md., and nephew of Montgomery County Treasurer John B. Diamond.

Miss Josephine Bell Nicol, 20, daughter of Charles Nicol, State roads commission employe, and Mrs. Nicol, of Gaithersburg.

The injured:

Returning from Carnival

The four University of Maryland students were riding in one car, with Diamond and Miss Nicol in front. They were returning from a carnival at Frederick, Md., with two other carloads following them.

Their car collided with the lumber truck, operated by Edwin Hugh Samuel, 20, of Crews, Va., on a curve just north of Henderson's Corner. The front end of the automobile was crushed by the load of lumber, which was en route to Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Samuel was charged with manslaughter and released on bond of $2,500 for appearance later in Rockville Police Court for preliminary hearing.

Young Diamond was a graduate of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. His father is a prominent milk producer and his parents are active workers of St. Martin's Catholic Church in Gaithersburg. He was a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Miss Nicol was an honor student at Gaithersburg High School, from which she was graduated in 1938, and was a junior at the University of Maryland.

Vichy Announces Anti-Jewish Policy Along Nazi Lines

Vichy, Unoccupied France, June 13 (AP).—Xavier Vallat, the Vichy government's commissioner for Jews, announced today that the general lines of Vichy's anti-Jewish policy will follow that already imposed by the Germans in the occupied zones of France, including the placarding of Jewish-owned shows and, possibly, the appointment of non-Jewish managers.

Vallat said the measures were temporary and were taken "to safeguard our national economy and French interests." He added that a permanent solution which must be "international or, at least, European," will have to await peace.

He said that the Surete National already had taken police measures against "a Jewish band which drained the country's resources" and that the most dangerous members had been interned in supervised camps.

Father, Son Killed In Truck-Car Crash

A father and son were killed and three other men injured, one critically, yesterday in a collision between an automobile and a truck 6 miles south of Elkton, Md.

The dead:

William Shivery, 60, of Elkton, and his son, Herbert Shivery, 32.

The injured: Maurice Jurgeans, of Elkton, brother of the driver of the automobile, suffered a skull fracture and internal injuries.

William Jurgeans, of Elkton, driver of the car, was pinned behind the steering wheel.

Richard Hartman, of Elkton, who was riding in the front seat with Jurgeans, escaped injury.

William Katz, of Baltimore, Md., driver of the truck, received only minor injuries.

In another accident at Braddock Heights, Md., Miss Alice Zeiler, Baltimore student nurse, suffered a fractured pelvis when her car overturned on a curve. She was taken to Frederick City Hospital.

Gestapo Rules Martinique, Refugees Say

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, June 13.—Penetration and control of the French island of Martinique by the German Gestapo is being accomplished through members of a newly formed French Nazi party, including French army officers and soldiers of avowedly pro-Nazi sympathies, it was related today by Jewish refugees arriving from the Caribbean.

The narrators were among 238 European refugees aboard the Alcoa liner Evangeline, in from Trinidad. All were passengers on the French liner Winnipeg when she was seized off Martinique by the Dutch gunboat von Kingsbergen on May 26. The Winnipeg is being held at Trinidad.

Many of the refugees were obviously wealthy. Representatives of the Evangeline said they had brought along surprisingly large sums in American and French money.

The refugees gave descriptions of their passage from Marseilles on a cargo ship carrying 800 persons, of whom at least 650 were passengers, although there were accommodations for only 65 bookings.

Slept on Open Deck

They told how 90 per cent of the passengers slept during the transatlantic trip on the open deck, because of the heat and congestion in the holds. Scores of passengers were ill of ptomaine poisoning during the ship's entire passage as a result of the "horrible" food, the refugees said. They were almost starving when the Van Kinsbergen saved them from going to Martinique by seizing the ship.

Some of the refugees vehemently contradicted reports that several hundred German-born refugees from the Winnipeg were being held by British officials in Trinidad as Nazi agents.

They intimated the British would have far more reason to suspect the pro-German French officers, crew and at least "50 French army officers and soldiers, most of whom openly said they were pro-Nazi."

This statement was made by Hermann Thorn, lawyer, whom the British at Trinidad named president of the German-Austrian refugee camp, and his wife, Finy Thorn, both Viennese Jewish refugees. They had lived the last 30 months in France, principally in internment and refugee camps.

All Were Terrified

"There were so many Nazi sympathizers among the French crew and among those French soldiers on the Winnipeg—we were told that there was one French general bound for Martinique but we could not learn his identity—that we all were terrified of going to Martinique," they said.

"And so we were very happy when at 2:30 a. m. on May 26, on a dark night, we were seized by that Dutch gunboat."

"We had been told repeatedly in France," Mr. and Mrs. Thorn added, "that the Gestapo had gained control of Martinique. Very well, possibly it was only rumor. But on that liner we actually came in contact with Frenchmen who boasted of their Naziism. French Nazis! Also, we learned that the Vichy government does not dare put any non-Nazi sympathizers as officers or crews aboard ships bound for Martinique for fear they will join the De Gaulle forces."

Mlle. Lysiane Bernhardt, French granddaughter of the actress, Sarah Bernhardt, arrived on the Evangeline on her way to California to visit friends. Mlle. Bernhardt said France was "unhappy" and that the food situation was bad, especially for children. She said she still has faith in Marshal Henri Petain, the French chief of state, but she did not wish to discuss politics.

House Approves Defense Buildings Outside District

Construction of $4,100,000 worth of temporary office buildings on sites outside the District was voted by the House yesterday on recommendation of its Appropriations Committee. About a month ago, both Houses of Congress agreed that the structures should go up only on District sites.

"Diligent search for adequate sites to accommodate the buildings has developed the fact that utilization of the sites that are available will create traffic difficulties that might be insurmountable," the committee stated.

"One of the sites chosen in the District was on the grounds of the Army War College . . . The site generally favored is the Arlington farm property immediately across the Potomac River."

Fall Kills Woman As She Saves Baby

FATAL PLUNGE—Mrs. Mary Hale, 50, was killed yesterday in a fall from a back-porch (lower) while saving her granddaughter, Sandra Holmes (top), 15 months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hale Holmes, 1611 R Street Southeast. In lower photo, a sheet covers Mrs. Spahn's body. She toppled backward through a weak railing (indicated by broken line) from the back porch, crushing her head on the concrete below. The baby, clutched closely to her breast, escaped with only minor injuries before putting her to bed. The porch was six feet above a concrete area leading to the basement. Mrs. Spahn was apparently leaning against the rail, which broke.

Often Played With Baby

Mrs. Spahn, who lives at 2008 Evarts Street Northeast, frequently visited the Holmes to play with Sandra.

Mrs. Spahn is the wife of David Spahn, chief petty officer at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. He was notified of the tragedy last night.

On her lapel Mrs. Spahn wore a brand-new Civilian Defense button. It designated her as a volunteer. She had registered only the day before.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death.

Bowhill to Head New Ocean Plane Ferry to England

By the Associated Press

London, June 13.—The air ministry announced today the appointment of Air Chief Marshal Sir Frederick Bowhill to command a new organization which will take delivery of warplanes from a "recently formed flight ferry command of the United States Army Air Corps" and fly them to British bases.

Sir Frederick will be succeeded as commander in chief of the Royal Air Force coastal command by Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert de la Ferte.

Informed sources said Bowhill will soon leave for Canada to organize the new command, which will bring the transatlantic plane ferrying task, hitherto a function of the ministry of aircraft production, under supervision of the air ministry.

The air marshal has won recognition for his success in developing the coastal command which he has headed since 1937. He is 61 years old and began his service career in his youth as a naval reserve midshipman.

D. C. Defense Volunteers Ready in Week

Within a week the first volunteers for home defense will probably be on duty, Mrs. Stuart A. Rice, chairman of the placement unit of the District Defense Council, disclosed yesterday.

The most pressing needs, she said, are for group recreation leaders, clerical workers and nurses' aides in hospitals. Also the Police and Fire Departments have asked that they be granted volunteers quickly for auxiliary civil protection work.

Meanwhile yesterday a stream of persons continued to offer their services at the Central Volunteer Headquarters, 499-501 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. Although the city-wide registration ended Thursday, the central office has announced that it will remain open every day except Saturday and Sunday from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. and until 10 p. m. on Tuesdays with a number of registrars on duty.

Tabulation Begun

Tabulation of the 17,300 cards of persons who registered during the three-day drive was to have begun yesterday in the central headquarters according to original plans. However, so many volunteers thronged the office, a spokesman said, that it was impossible to do the job. A number of women volunteers will begin the card-punch on Monday which will probably take several weeks.

After the cards have been coded and filed by skills, the volunteers will be notified to report to the central headquarters for an additional interview as needed, it was said.

Training Planned

This interview will be given with the volunteer's qualifications and the specifications of the agency requesting help specifically in mind. Also it was said, those persons who have indicated that they wish to undergo special training will be notified where they may receive such schooling.

Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman of the Volunteer Service Committee, said many requests have been received from groups wishing to be registered in a body at some particular place. Plans are under way to take care of these groups, she said, suggesting they file an application with the Central Volunteer Bureau.

Registrars will then be sent to give individual interviews to members of these groups, she declared. It is expected this system will bring thousands more within the home defense program.

Man Gives $8.37 In Savings to U. S. O.

A middle-aged man brought four small cans stuffed with coins to the campaign headquarters of United Service Organizations here yesterday, with the observation that he had saved for a worthy cause and the USO seemed to be it.

He gave his name as Harry Katz, 1666 Montello Avenue Northeast, but reluctantly and only after the office staff had insisted that he take a receipt for his contribution. In the four cans were 512 pennies, 44 nickles, 8 dimes and 1 quarter, totaling $8.37.

Sidney F. Taliaferro, chairman, District USO campaign, has sent a special delivery letter to Katz, saying that if all Washingtonians would act "in the same spirit of generosity and thoughtfulness" the District's quota of $250,000 would easily be met.

London, June 13 (AP).—Capt. James Roosevelt, en route to London from Cairo, probably will arrive in Lisbon tomorrow, it was reported today.

It was anticipated he would fly to London immediately on his arrival in the Portuguese capital.

Jury Shown 'Red' Books Urging Discord

A library of Communism—70 books sold in this country by Boekniga Corporation of New York—was placed yesterday before a District Court jury trying three alleged Soviet agents for criminal conspiracy.

From the books Special Assistant Attorney General Benjamin Parker read passages which he said were the wavecaps of a 10-year flood of Soviet propaganda.

From "Leninism," by Joseph Stalin, the Russian dictator, Parker chose this paragraph on "the fundamental task of the Communist Parties of the West:"

"This task (said Stalin) is to link the Communist Parties of the West with the trade unions. This task is to develop the campaign for unity in the trade union movement and to bring it to its consummation; to make it the absolute duty of all Communists to join the trade unions; to carry on systematic work in them in order to unite the workers in a united front against capital, and thus create the conditions that will enable the Communist Parties to rely upon the support of the trade unions."

Accused of being the instruments of this policy are the three defendants, Morris Liskin, president of Boekniga Corporation; Norman Weinberg, secretary, and Raphael Rush, vice president. Rush and Weinberg also are accused of violating the law requiring registration of foreign agents with the State Department. Liskin pleaded guilty to the latter charge.

The Government contends that Boekniga was one of a series of corporations formed in this country, one after another, with the mission of concealing the propaganda enterprise under the masquerade of a legitimate book business.

The defense counsel, Leo A. Rover, Isadore Englander and David A. Hart, challenged introductions of many of the Russian books.

not appropriated for as the amounts are continued from year to year, were estimated expenditures from trust funds, grants and indefinite appropriations for 1942 totaling $3,818,683.

Almost without exception, the increases allowed by the committee over this year's appropriation were attributed to the Capital's swift growth in the defense emergency.

Maine Avenue Project Included

A summary of principal additions to the bill follows:

The highway department was given an increase of $814,294, including $300,000 to start grade separation of Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest and a new bridge across the Tidal Basin outlet. Both projects are aimed at relieving congestion at one of the city's worst traffic bottlenecks.

Save for reduction of $200,000 in a $700,000 estimate for construction of a senior high school at fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast, the school building program was approved as submitted to the committee.

A total of $1,489,417 was approved for new school buildings and sites. The committee ended the controversy over location of the Abbot Vocational School by naming Brentwood Park as the site and approving $200,000 for a building to cost, ultimately, $500,000.

The Metropolitan Police Department was given funds for 54 additional policement, though Maj. Ernest W. Brown, the superintendent, and Commissioner John Russell Young asked the committee for 100 new men.

New Health Center in Bill

Pointing out that "much criticism has been heard of the lack of ambulance facilities," money was granted for a new type of combination scout car and ambulance. Two cars of this kind were approved in addition to funds to equip 20 scout cars with two-way radios.

With slight changes, all Health Department estimates were approved, including $20,000 for site and plans for a new Northwest Health Center, long urged by Dr. George Ruhland, District health officer.

One of the city's oldest and most urgent welfare needs—a new Receiving Home for Children to replace the much-criticized structure at 816 Potomac Avenue Southeast—was voted $108,000.

Increase by $450,000 in the public welfare budget included $75,000 for the purchase of food stamps from the Department of Agriculture for the distribution of surplus commodities.

$210,000 for Library

To start construction of a new high-temperature refuse incinerator, the committee provided $150,000, one-half of the ultimate building cost.

To continue construction of the first unit of a Public Library, $340,000 was allowed, while $25,000 was approved for the purchase of a site for a branch library in Anacostia.

The committee also voted $1,000,000 to continue construction of the new National Guard Armory.

Recognition was given to effect of the emergency both on the city's water needs and the desirability of safeguards against sabotage of the water supply by approval of $400,000 for a covered reservoir adjacent to the McMillan filtration plant.

The chief items cut from estimates and the committees' explanation for some of its action were:

Requests from District officials for funds to start a project to replace the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains, D. C., and three other frequently criticized welfare institutions were denied.

The committee slashed also at Gallinger Hospital estimates for 53 additional attendants of which 43 were to be nurses.

At the same time, the Fire Department was denied $57,790 for a new truck company at No. 19 Engine House at Twenty-eighth Place and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, in a community where many defense workers are finding new homes.

District officials asked for $70,000 for acquisition of land and preparation of plans for a new Welfare Center intended to be located on a 1,000-acre site well beyond the city limits in either Virginia or Maryland. They proposed to locate there, in addition to the Home for the Aged, the National Training School for Girls, the Industrial Home School, and the Industrial Home School for colored.

In rejecting this item, the committee pointed out that the total estimated cost of the completed project is $3,000,000, and declared:

"While the committee is in sympathy with the proposal, it is of the opinion that the project is one that can well be deferred until conditions in the construction field have subsided. It is probable that if this program is continued at the present time, it will face many difficulties in securing supplies and labor which are being diverted to national defense and it is likewise probable that such material and labor, if available, will be secured at maximum prices.

"Recent improvements at the institutions included in this program have placed them in a better condition than they have been in for several years and it is believed that they should be continued in operation until the present emergency condition has improved."

Gallinger Funds Increased

Nevertheless, the committee voted a $171,780 increase for Gallinger, of which $114,800 was allocated for personal services and $51,500 for repairs and improvements.

If a new truck company is needed at No. 19 Engine House, the committee suggested that "it should be provided by transfer of an existing company to this area."

The appropriation for Gallinger carried a rider which would bar the hospital's facilities, except in emergencies, to all persons who have lived in the District for less than a year at the time of application for admission.

This provision was cited by the committee in explaining deduction of $75,300 for additional personnel and a $25,000 cut in the total requested for maintenance and supplies. The committee also stated that it had made an investigation of the ratio between employes and patients in similar hospitals in cities of comparable size.

Gallinger, if allowed the personnel increase requested, would have one employe for every 12 patients "as contrasted with 1.6 provided in the 1939 law." The ratio in other cities, the committee declared, is one employe for "slightly less" than every 1.6 patients. The "investigation," it was disclosed, was based on a United States Public Health survey made in 1935.

Anacostia Bridge Eliminated

Eliminated entirely from the bill was a proposal to build a bridge spanning the Anacostia River from South Capitol and P Streets to the vicinity of the Naval Air Station. Ultimate cost of the undertaking was estimated at $4,500,000 and $100,000 was requested as a starting amount.

"This action is not due to the fact that the committee is opposed to the project, but in the belief that it should be deferred temporarily until the recently proposed defense highway plan had an opportunity to develop," the committee reported.

"The committee believes that this bridge . . . would probably be on any list of national defense projects and that a portion of the expense may be charged to national defense funds."

At the same time, the committee gave impetus to the move for a new bridge and tunnels crossing the Potomac River from the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., and No. 1 Highway to Shepherd's Landing, Blue Plains, D. C.

In approving $365,000 for Federal-aid highway projects, the committee inserted a provision directing the District Commissioners to begin conferences on the proposal with officials of the Public Roads Administration, Virginia and the city of Alexandria.

Bill Forbids Nonresidents In D. C. Schools

A provision requiring tuition payment for nonresident children attending public schools in the District is carried in conjunction with a $13,744,688 school appropriation recommended to the House by the Appropriations Committee yesterday.

The committee provided for a new Abbot Vocational School, to be built on the Brentwood tract, and three other new school buildings—eight-room additions to the Benning and Van Ness schools and the new Springarn colored senior high school at Twenty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast.

High School Funds Cut

The $700,000 estimate for the high school was reduced by $200,000, the committee explaining:

"The contract time for this project is 400 days from sometime in October, 1941, and under most favorable conditions it will not be ready for occupancy until February, 1943. Under these circumstances the committee is of the opinion that an appropriation of $500,000 for the fiscal year 1942 should be adequate to meet payments due the contractor during the next fiscal year."

Money also was approved in the bill for a site for an elementary school at Hillside Road and Alabama Avenue Northeast, a colored junior high school at Forty-ninth Street and Washington Place Northeast and for sites for elementary schools at Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets Northeast and at Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Street Southeast.

Funds for Wilson High

To continue construction of the Anacostia Junior High School, $375,000 was provided and funds also were voted to complete six unfinished classrooms at Woodrow Wilson High School and for construction of an underpass at Hiatt Place to connect the Powell Junior High School and the Johnson Building.

The committee told the House that the cost of educating nonresident children will cost the District more than $260,000 this year. During executive hearings on the bill Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, declared that 2,696 children in Washington schools live in nearby Maryland and Virginia, while an additional 146 pupils come from homes of members of Congress and officers of the Army and Navy.

The Board of Education was urged by the committee to give "early consideration" to provision of adequate classroom and other facilities at the Lafayette School.

D. C. Water Fund Faces Deficit Of $205,926, House Is Told

Inclusion of "several substantial appropriations" to meet the "urgent need for expansion and improvement of the water supply" is responsible for an anticipated deficit of $205,926 in the District's water fund, the Appropriations Committee reported to the House yesterday.

To meet the deficit the committee inserted a provision in the 1942 appropriation bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell United States securities "now held to the credit of the water fund and heretofore purchased with water-fund revenues."

The total proposed outlay for the District Water Department as carried in the appropriation bill submitted to the House yesterday, is $2,839,080, of which $756,700 is proposed to be spent for emergency extension, improvement and protection of the water system as follows:

For construction of a covered reservoir of some 20,000,000-gallon capacity on Federal land near the McMillan filtration plant, $400,000 to start.

Construction of a 34-inch water main between Good Hope Road, Twenty-fifth Street, Alabama and Massachusetts Avenues Southeast, $141,000.

Construction of a 36-inch water main from Thirteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest to Thirteenth and Otis Streets Northeast, $200,000 to start.

For protective fencing around reservoirs and pumping stations to facilitate guarding against sabotage, $15,700.

With the exception of a $25,000 deduction in an estimate of $475,000 for normal extension the water distribution system, the committee approved the water budget as submitted. The Water Department total was $115,725 below the 1941 appropriation.

Budget Hearing Opened by Tribute To D. J. Donovan

The District appropriations subcommittee began consideration of the 1942 supply bill with a tribute to Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, the late District auditor, publication of proceedings revealed yesterday.

"A lot of things have happened since our hearings last year," Chairman George H. Mahon told the gathering of legislators and District officials. "There is one thing in particular to which I want to make reference, and that is the passing of our old friend, Dan Donovan.

"I have never met a finer or more capable man in the Government service than Dan Donovan, and I know that every member of this committee and every member of Congress who knew him had the same high regard and respect for him."

Commissioner John Russell Young and Representative Karl Stefan, ranking minority member of the subcommittee, joined in the tribute.

Subcommittee Members Praise D. C. Parole Board

Commendation for the work of the District Parole Board was voiced by members of the District appropriations subcommittee during hearings on the 1942 District appropriation bill, it was disclosed yesterday when the measure was reported to the House.

When Frank R. Jelleff, board chairman, told the subcommittee that with 553 former convicts under supervision the parole violations were only 10 per cent, Representative Karl Stefan, ranking minority member of the committee, declared:

"That is a wonderful work you are doing, Mr. Jelleff . . . We have 22,000 Federal prisoners in Federal institutions and 50 per cent of them go back."

matic corps and officers of the foreign liaison section of the Red army general staff.

(Germany's blitzkrieg movies, notably of the Polish campaign and of the war on Germany's Western Front, have been shown widely abroad for their propaganda effect, and notably to small gatherings of diplomats and military attaches in capitals where Germany's political pressure has been greatest.)

Coincidentally, the magazine Bolshevik, organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, restated the foreign policy of the Stalin government today as one based on independence.

"Soviet foreign policy," said the magazine, "is conditioned only by the interests of the people of the U. S. S. R. It is an independent Stalinist policy.

"All attempts to involve the Soviet Union in the chain of imperialist intrigues and to wish on it an even indirect dependence on one warring side or the other have suffered complete failure.

"Neither threats nor advances can influence the policy of the Soviet government."

The Soviet statement on German relations said that German troops, released for other assignments by the Nazi sweep of the Balkans, were being moved into eastern and northeastern Germany (facing Russia).

The statement, issued through Tass, official news agency, and broadcast to the world by the Moscow radio, flatly denied that Germany had made any territorial or ecnomic demands on Russia, declared that Russia planned no fight and guardedly interpreted the German troop movements as no concern of Russia's.

As to Germany's intentions, the Soviet interpretation was qualified by such phrases as "according to information at the disposal of the U. S. S. R. . . ." ". . . in the opinion of Soviet quarters . . ." and finally ". . . it should be assumed. . . ."

Tass said that the "intense dissemination of rumors on 'the proximity of war between the U. S. S. R. and Germany'"—concurring with the consultation trip to London by the British Ambassador to Moscow, Sir Stafford Cripps—had necessitated the statement.

Tass arrayed the rumors and then the Russian counterstatements, declaring that:

1. Germany had presented no territorial or economic claims to the U. S. S. R. "and does not propose any new, clear agreement, in view of which no negotiations on this subject could have taken place."

2. "According to information at the disposal of the U. S. S. R., Germany abides by the provisions of the Soviet-German pact of nonaggression as unswervingly as the Soviet Union, in view of which, in the opinion of Soviet quarters, rumors on Germany's intention to disrupt the pact and undertake attack on the U. S. S. R. are devoid of any ground, whereas dispatching of German troops, relieved from operations in the Balkans, to the eastern and northeastern district of Germany, which is now taking place, is connected, it should be assumed, with other motives having no bearing on Soviet-German relations."

"Russia Abides by . . . Pact"

3. Russia abides by provisions of the Russian-German pact, "in view of which rumors to the effect that the U. S. S. R. is preparing for war with Germany are false and provocational."

4. "Summer camp drills of Red Army reservists, held at present, and forthcoming maneuvers have no other purpose than training of reservists and checking of the work of the railroad organization, carried out, as it is known, every year, in view of which to present these measures of the Red Army as inimical to Germany is, to say the least, absurd."

Tass, reviewing the "rumors," said they purported to tell of "proximity of war between the U. S. S. R. and Germany."

The statement declared that they were so persistently circulated by the British and foreign press, in general, that Tass had been authorized to state that they were but "clumsily concocted propaganda of forces hostile to the U. S. S. R. and to Germany and interested in further extension and unleasing of the war."

One rumor, Tass said, was that Germany had presented territorial and economic demands on Russia and that negotiations for a "new, closer agreement" were under way; another that Russia had refused, causing Germany to concentrate troops at the Russian frontier "for the purpose of attacking the Soviet Union."

Still another phase of rumors, Tass said, was that Russia had begun "intense preparations for war with Germany and was concentrating troops at the latter's borders."

British Eagerly Watch Russian, Nazi Moves

By the Associated Press.

London, June 13 (AP).—The great diplomatic mystery over the state of relations between Germany and Russia gripped government and foreign circles here tonight.

It was reported in semiofficial British quarters that Germany has made demands on Russia which would shake the Soviet's grasp on her Baltic and Black Sea spheres of interest and which are so far-reaching that the Soviet could grant them only with the utmost reluctance.

Speculation ranged all the way from the view that Adolf Hitler and Premier Josef Stalin at last are about to go to the mat in a test of military strength to the suspicion that a gigantic bluffing game is going on, with perhaps Britain herself playin the biggest game of all.

Reports of Germany and Russia moving large bodies of troops about their mutual frontier have been recurrent throughout the war, and stories that the two nations were about to fight gained special circulation when Russia and then Hungary took parts of Rumania just before Germany launched her Balkan invasion.

Now the reports are being revived with emphasis at a time when Germany must be considering means of advancing her drive on Suez—toward which Turkey presents the most advantageous route.

Ambassador Home

Britain's obscure part in the situation was highlighted by the presence here of Sir Stafford Cripps, the Ambassador to Moscow.

Informed quarters for the first time admitted today that his discussions with government officials were primarily concerned with German-Russian relations.

Three versions of the situation were current in London:

1. The semiofficial British view that Berlin-Moscow relations are strained as a result of Hitler's demands for concessions in the Ukraine and Soviet oil fields.

2. The view of a good many diplomatic observers that Britain is using reports of German military concentrations along the Russian border to stir up a "nerve war" of her own.

Britain is simply hoping to loosen the bonds of the German-Russian economic collaboration which she regards as none too secure, and hopes to scare the Soviet into more amicable relations with London by building up the Nazi threat.

3. The third version is that Britain is trying to bring Russia and Germany to war by creating mutual suspicion. It is pointed out by persons holding this view that no military campaign the British could launch would be of so much value to her as a diplomatic offensive which resulted in diverting millions of German soldiers and thousands of Nazi aircraft into an offensive to the east.

Pilot Is Blamed In Air Crash

30.33. The setting, supplied by the Atlanta station shortly before the crash and based on barometric pressure at sea level, should have been 30.23.

The report acknowledged the crash might have affected the readings, but emphasized that the readings as found, or their approximations, would have accounted for the crash.

The report pointed out that James A. Perry, flight captain of the airliner obviously did not know that he was flying at such a low altitude. In order to have flown so low, the report continued, Capt. Perry must have either ignored his altimeters altogether or must have placed reliance on altimeters which were either out of order or improperly set. The report added that it could not determine whether Capt. Perry or Pilot Luther E. Thomas was at the controls at the time of the crash and that the evidence indicated the instruments had been functioning properly most of the flight. It placed the blame on Perry as the flight captain.

The airliner carried 13 passengers and a crew of 3. Five passengers and the crew were killed and eight others were injured. Everything was going well at 11:44 p. m. (C. S. T.), six minutes before the crash. The plane, at that time, reported: "Flying at 800 feet above sealevel over Atlanta range station." That station is two miles southeast of Atlanta Airport. The Atlanta operator then radioed: "Dispatcher suggests you land straight in." The plane acknowledged the message but after that no further contact could be made with the plane.

The airliner was found early the following day, a twisted mass of wreckage, seven miles from Candler Field, Atlanta.

No comment on the findings was available from Eastern Air Lines last night.

D. C. Budget May Be Raised By $7,832,878

Additional District Budget estimates totaling $7,832,878—result of House leaders' requests for a list of emergency projects—last night were being studied by Chairman George H. Mahon, of the District Appropriations Subcommittee.

Mahon said that no decision on the items would be reached until after Congress completes action on the $52,547,081 District appropriation bill reported to the House yesterday.

Submission of the list of projects was requested to District officials at a conference at the Capitol Thursday. At this time, it was agreed that any proposal to increase 1942 appropriations would be accomplished by a move to raise District taxes by enough to pay for the increase provided the Federal payment is increased by $1,500,000.

The list was almost entirely comprised of construction projects deemed necessary to bring Washington's municipal plant to full capacity to satisfy requirements of the defense emergency. Major items on the list were:

Sanitary Department, $363,553; Welfare Department, $713,000, including $360,000 for dormitory and infirmary buildings at the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains, D. C.; Police Department, $40,000 for a new precinct station; Fire Department, $230,000 for two new firehouses; Public Library, $110,000 for completion of the new central building; public schools, $2,718,150, chiefly for new buildings in Northeast and Southeast Washington; Health Department, $881,000, including $250,000 to build a Northwest health center, and $300,000 to start construction of a new ward at Gallinger; Highway Department, $1,683,175 for street paving and resurfacing.

Army Preparing Dictionaries In 7 Languages

The Army disclosed yesterday that it was preparing seven foreign language military dictionaries, first of their kind ever to be published.

Containing technical words, military terms and even soldier slang, the cross-language vocabularies are expected to be of great advantage to intelligence and combat officers in examining prisoners of war, deciphering documents, etc. A preliminy Spanish-English edition is just off the press, to be followed by Portuguese, German, French, Italian and Russian editions.

Ruhr Blasted, New Weapon Startles Nazis

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), June 14.—British bombers roaring across the Channel early today apparently were blasting at Calais and Boulogne in the third consecutive night attack on German-held territory.

The new slash at the French Channel coast ports followed a night of terrific R. A. F. activity over the entire length of the industrially important Ruhr Valley.

German raiders made scattered attacks on Britain and five of them were reported shot down.

Nazi bombs striking a southeastern coastal area demolished homes and trapped several persons in the wreckage.

The second consecutive night assault there, described officially as "the heaviest carried out in a single night against this industrial area," was followed up by an attempted Luftwaffe retaliatory assault this afternoon, but the R. A. F. was reported to have beaten the Nazis off in a five-minute clash over the Channel.

Many industrial buildings were demolished, the air ministry said of Thursday night's Ruhr raid.

Bombers flew again and again over this compact region which produces about three-fourths of the Reich's coal and iron and steel, the No. 1 essentials for producing war machines.

[The Berlin district air defense command advised Germans in the capital yesterday to go to air raid shelters immediately now when the sirens sound because "the enemy's new-type weapon has a severe effect." There was no elaboration, but British reports of recent air operations have described a new super bomb which apparently was used in the Ruhr attack.]

"Buildings were sharply silhouetted against walls of fire," continued the British account, "and warehouses could be seen completely gutted. Whole areas often were lit in flames.

"At one vital railway yard the the bursting of a bomb was followed by a succession of explosions in a line, one after another over a period of 10 minutes as though a store of ammunition had been hit."

the whole force was observed to be retiring towards the Skaggerak at greatly reduced speed."

Informed sources said severe damage was indicated by that reduced speed, a gait of 10 miles an hour or less.

None, however, identified the pocket battleship by name and there was speculation as to whether she was the Admiral Scheer or the Luetzow, (formerly the Deutschland) the only two of the strong, swift 10,000-ton craft, armed with 11-inch guns, which Germany is known to have since the scuttling of the Admiral Graf Spee at Montevideo, Uruguay, December 17, 1939.

The air ministry news service said that not a single shot was fired at the attacking planes by the German squadron.

The air ministry news service said the Beaufort, which attacked first, was piloted by a flight sergeant from the oft-bombed City of Coventry, with a sergeant from Saskatchewan as navigator

"The enemy force was in a clear patch of weather," said the pilot. "The pocket battleship was in the middle, with one destroyer immediately ahead and two others on each side.

"They formed a pretty effective screen from a torpedo attack. It was fairly light—you could see for several miles—and we flew in at right angles across the stern of the battleship.

"Then we made a right-about turn and came back at her broadside less than 100 feet high.

"I had to skid the aircraft around close. We could see its camouflage in detail.

"I let the torpedo go just after the stern of one of the destroyers to get into position to drop the torpedo. The destroyer was very we had passed the destroyer and then sheered off to the left, crossing about 100 yards in front of the battleship's bow.

"A few seconds later my rear gunner yelled 'There's a column of water.' As I turned the aircraft to look back I could see a great patch of white foam against the ship and a dense cloud of dirty white smoke amidships. We got away without a shot being fired."

Unions Warned Against Raiding

board of Union 544 had replied that Tobin was unable to cope with the "growing rank and file revolt against his dictatorial rule." A board statement said that "the great mass of the rank and file truck drivers throughout the Nation hate the name of Dictator Tobin. They welcome a revolt against him and the beginning of reorganization in a modern progressive industrial union—the C. I. O."

The incident, coupled with the White House statement, was seen, however, as likely to bring to a head more quickly an intra-C. I. O. battle over purging left-wing groups.

In this fight Murray, as a "responsible" and conservative unionist, enjoys the backing of the Administration, many of whose labor officials are frank in proclaiming their views that John L. Lewis is in the opposite corner and constitutes the major support for left-wing C. I. O. leaders.

A. D. Lewis' action in taking Local 544 into the fold was interpreted by Government labor advisors as an attempt to embarrass Murray and serve notice that one faction of the C. I. O., at least, would shelter and fight for the left-wingers.

In making public the President's views on the necessity of calling a truce to inter-union raiding, Early also quoted Tobin's wire to the White House in which he said it was apparent to him that because of his stand behind the Government, "all subversive organizations—all enemies of Government, including Bundists, Stalinites, Trotskyites and others—are working to destroy trade unions that are supporting to preserve the democracy which the national Government in efforts is ours."

U. S. Watches Fight Raging Over Curran

Government agents who have been investigating the Communist Party are keenly watching a tug-of-war that has developed around Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, C. I. O.

This union, according to witnesses who have appeared before the Dies Committee, is thoroughly dominated by Communists, more so perhaps than any union in the C. I. O.

Curran himself has been called a Communist. He has denied it, and a lot of people on the New York waterfront believe him in his disavowal. They agree with Jan Valtin that he is merely a "marionette" for the Communists, specifically for Tommy Ray, the real boss of the N. M. U.

In the tug-of-war that has broken out over Curran, Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., is at one end, and Tommy Ray and the Communists at the other. Murray, it would appear, is trying to get Curran to turn on the Communists, and he is reported to have persuaded Curran to cancel a speech here the other night before the American Peace Mobilization.

Ralph Hetzel, of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, protested to The Washington Post yesterday against being included in a list of Communists and fellow travelers which Chairman Dies placed in the Congressional Record last March.

Hetzel pointed out that on April 3 Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, took the floor to exonerate him of Communist affiliations. Hetzel protested that Allan Haywood, of the New York State Industrial Union Council, and William Mitch, of the Alabama State Industrial Council, had also been wrongfully listed as Communists or fellow travelers.

The Congressional Record shows that Representative Casey, in a speech warning against hot-headedness and hysteria, said that he knew Ralph Hetzel and knew him well. He traced Hetzel's career, noting that he was graduated from the Pennsylvania State College, served as confidential secretary to Gifford Pinchot when the latter was Governor of Pennsylvania, and attended the London School of Economics. In 1937, Casey said, Hetzel became secretary "to John L. Lewis, then president of the C. I. O.

"He does not now have nor ever has had any connection with the Communist Party or with any organizations connected with the Communist Party," Representative Casey said. "His only affiliation is with the labor movement."

Damascus May Plead 'Open City'

By the Associated Press

Damascus, Syria, June 13.—The defenders of Syria have decided to declare this ancient capital an open city, it was indicated today, and thus spare its population of 200,000 from the dangers a defense would bring.

The invading British and Free French columns apparently made no progress toward Damascus today, remaining about 10 miles south of the city in the neighborhood of Kissoue, where a communique said there was fighting, with the French successfully stemming the British attacks.

Regardless of the progress of these troops, it appeared that Damascus would be treated as an unfortified city and thus be undefended, as was Paris in the face of the German advance.

3 Axis Planes Lost Off Syria

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, June 13.—British Imperial pilots in widespread Mediterranean operations shot down 14 Axis warplanes, bombed and set afire several Axis ships, and heavily attacked airdromes on the Italian island of Rhodes, a communique said tonight.

Eleven Axis planes were shot down over Malta yesterday, and Australian fighters claimed three German Junkers in a battle off the Lebanese coast, the official communique said.

Four British planes were lost in the entire operations which extended from British-invaded Lebanon in the east to Bengasi harbor in Italian Libya. Two British pilots were rescued.

The three Junkers destroyed by the Australians today three miles west of Sidon, Lebanon, were part of an Axis formation attacking British warships there. They were said to bear Italian markings. Some of them were forced to jettison their bombs and were damaged in fleeing when the Australians tore into them.

The Malta action occurred yesterday morning and evening. Five Axis planes were shot down in the first battle and six in the second.

Japan Can Never Beat China, Hemingway Says

model. The death penalty starts with stealing, interfering with the people, insubordination and goes on through all the usual army crimes. They also have a few innovations such as an entire section being shot if the section leaders advances and the section cannot get its legs moving, and other advancements in the art of making a soldier know that death is certain from behind and only possible from in front.

If we take the German idea of an army as an ideal the best central government troops are very close to it. They know the trade of soldiering, they travel fast, they eat little compared to European troops, they are not afraid of death, and they have the best of the unhuman quolities that makes a man a good soldier.

The Chinese medical service is fairly lamentable. One of the greatest difficulties is caused by the doctors' dislike of being near the fighting. Their position is that it takes a long time and much money to produce a doctor and then it is unjust and unreasonable to expect such an expensive and rare product to be exposed to possible extermination by enemy projectiles. As a result by the time the Chinese wounded see a doctor it would often have been kinder to have shot them where they fell. Dr. Robert Lim has done much to change this conception of the doctor's role in the war. But the Chinese medical service is still far from perfect.

The troops of the central government have had no publicity. The Communists have welcomed good writers and have been well written up. Three million other men have died to oppose Japan without adequate press cuttings.

Much Depends on Chiang

Anyone who says or writes that the troops of the central government armies are not a magnificently disciplined, well trained, well officered and excellently armed defensive force has never seen them at the front.

There are many things needed before they can go on the offensive on any large scale. They also face certain grave problems but you can bet that no matter what you may hear if the central government has money to pay, feed and continue to arm them they are not going to be defeated by the Japanese this year, nor next year, nor the year after. Nor, if you want my absolute opinion, having seen the terrain, the problems involved, and the troops who will do the fighting, will the Japanese ever defeat the Chinese army unless it is sold out. As long as the United States is putting up the money to pay and arm them and the Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, is in command they will not be sold out. But, if we ceased to back them or if anything ever happened to the generalissimo they would be sold out very quickly.

The main drawbacks to the Chinese army going on the offensive is their lack of competent airforce and their lack of artillery.

D. C. Supply Bill

Simply to say that the District appropriations bill reported to the House yesterday carries a larger sum than has ever been voted for Washington in a single year is meaningless. The sum of the proposed appropriations has to be measured against the city's current needs, which are much greater than they have ever been before. When a city is growing at the rate of 65,000 inhabitants or more a year, it is naive to think in terms of what its budget contained in previous years.

The surprising thing, under these circumstances, is that the House District Committee slashed more than a million dollars from the Commissioners' estimates. Many of the items thus eliminated may have to be restored under the supplemental budget which the local authorities are preparing in agreement with District Committee heads. That view is strengthened by a glance at some of the eliminated items. Among these was an allowance for 58 additional nurses and other employes at Gallinger Hospital. Long a victim of misguided economy, Gallinger will have to continue relying upon uncertain voluntary help, in spite of its heavier load, if this decision is permitted to stand.

Other items that were eliminated would have permitted a start on the proposed new welfare center and the approaches to the proposed bridge across the Anacostia River at South Capitol Street. Neither project can be delayed without a real sacrifice in community service.

There will be widespread approval of the allowance for more police and the funds for new schools, the central library, a children's receiving home and the new Northwest health center. Washington is so far behind in the construction of community structures of this sort that years will be required to catch up. Indeed, all hope of catching up will be lost unless Congress recognizes the city's extraordinary needs growing out of the defense program and adjusts the final appropriations bill to that pattern.

Reaping The Whirlwind

It has taken a national crisis to shatter the short-sighted labor policy which the Adminstration has been following since 1935. Recent strikes in defense industries have at last brought officials face to face with the ugly reality that Communists, agitators and convicts are strongly entrenched in a good many unions. That fact is now recognized as a grave danger to our national security. So the Administration is reported to be belatedly planning a campaign to oust these troublemakers from defense jobs and to support responsible union leaders in house-cleaning efforts.

This forthright action is to be heartily applauded. It would be equivalent to national suicide to let enemies of the United States retain positions that may be used, and are being used, to cripple our defense industries. By helping to rid organized labor of its subversive fringe, the Administration will be rendering a great service to the rank and file of working men as well as to the Nation itself. But there should be no illusion as to the source of the menace which now compels drastic action. The Administration itself has sown the seeds and is reaping the whirlwind. For its policies up to the present time have given aid, comfort and protection to the wild men of the labor movement who are now stopping the wheels of industry in an emergency.

Heretofore it has actually been an unfair labor practice to discharge Communists and potential saboteurs from American industrial plants! If employers so much as suggested that individuals fomenting strikes among their employes were Communists, they could have been haled before the National Labor Relations Board. Even now the law does not recognize unfair practices on the part of labor leaders, whether they resort to terroristic methods, call strikes for the greater glory of Stalin, or halt production to cripple American defense. Under a biased and lop-sided statute the Government has given full protection to rackets as well as legitimate unions. Indeed, as the Supreme Court now interprets the law, Communists and irresponsible bosses may even halt interstate commerce to smash a legitimate union certified by the NLRB. Nothing has yet been done to end this reign of jungle law, though there is a beginning in the ouster campaign that is being planned.

If we emphasize the fact that the Administration is ready to act against the irresponsible and subversive minority in the labor movement only because its own ox is being gored, it is because thoroughgoing reform is overdue. The Administration finds the policy it has inflicted upon industry in general to be intolerable when it is applied to the filling of Government defense orders. This inconsistency cannot be explained merely by pointing to the present national emergency. A wise policy makes allowance for emergencies before they arise, instead of trying to combat them by drastic correctives after much damage has been done. The fact is that the National Labor Relations Act has been grossly unfair and impracticable from the beginning. It properly protects the right of collective bargaining. But it fails to impose upon unions responsibility commensurate with the power it gives them. Under its terms the NLRB has gone so far as to challenge free speech on the part of employers, while the bosses, little dictators and foreign agents were given a free hand to bulldoze employes and employers alike.

These abuses do not minimize the desirability of collective bargaining. But they do point to the necessity for a change in the law to prevent traitors and professional troublemakers from using the machinery of organized labor for their own purposes. It will not be easy to write into the law safeguards that will protect every legitimate function of unions without putting workers and employers at the mercy of the Paul Martins, the Balints, the Christoffels and the Currans. But Congress must grapple with that problem, and it should do so with a minimum of delay.

State Of War

The Nazis have anticipated an American protest over the sinking of the Robin Moor by saying that they will not be "buffaloed" by any discussions. This is probably a curt notice that there will be only a perfunctory exchange of diplomatic notes between Washington and Berlin. It is just as well that argument should be kept to the minimum. For the issue is plain enough. Hitler, in order to strangle Britain and then to assume a commanding position over this hemisphere, is making a bid for control of the Atlantic Ocean. His sinking of the Robin Moor merely underlines the bid. It is a flat challenge, moreover, to the historic American policy of freedom of the seas which has been the cornerstone of our security and of our liberties since the dawn of the Republic. And the challenge is belligerently pointed by the fact that it comes on the heels of the President's reassertion on May 27 of our freedom of the seas policy and his declaration that we would fight for it. "We shall actively resist his [Hitler's] every attempt to gain control of the seas," he said. Little more, therefore, need be added to the wordage of the subject now that Hitler has flung in our faces his contempt for an American policy which is so basic to the survival of our free institutions. The time has come to resist Hitler, and the way to resist is obviously to resist.

It is thus our answer rather than our protest to Hitler that will concern the American people. If we allow the freedom of the Atlantic to be taken away from us without a struggle, we shall be derelict to every admonition of our statesmen from Thomas Jefferson on. Sea freedom is the insulating agent whereby we have been enabled to retain our domestic freedoms. If the one goes, the others will vanish one by one. From Hitler's standpoint this piecemeal method of subjugating those who stand in his path has hitherto been a sure recipe of complete success. "A clever conqueror," he says in Mein Kampf, "will always, if possible, impose his demands on the conquered by installments. For a people that makes a voluntary surrender saps its own character; and with such a people you can calculate that none of these oppressions in detail will supply quite enough reason for it to resort once more to arms. The more such extortions are suffered without resistance, the more unjustifiable it comes to seem to people to make any ultimate stand against pressures; which appear each to be new and isolated, though in fact there is a perpetual recurrence of them." This is exactly the medicine which Hitler is meting out to the United States as the country which is the ultimate check on his imperial and oceanic career. With his breath he disclaims, as a figment of American imagination, any ambitions in this hemisphere; with his actions he is closing in on all the approaches to this hemisphere, and seeking to control the waters which wash its shores from the Arctic to the Falklands. He knows, and everybody with the meaning of sea power in his bones knows, that control of the Atlantic would give Hitler not satisfaction but only a weapon for forcing the disintegration of our continental solidarity.

If our President were not so conscious of the meaning of the Battle of the Atlantic, he would not have made his May 27 reassertion of our overriding stake in that battle. Nor would our people have applauded him with such acclamation. In reaffirming our policy of the freedom of the seas, the President found his success not in the cogency of his arguments but in the predisposition of the American people to receive them. For the Hitler menace has made the Atlantic recognizably our front yard and the front yard of most of our sister republics. And Hitler, first in the case of the Zamzam and now in that of the Robin Moor, has indicated as plainly as can be indicated that he will be content with nothing less than the sovereignty of that front yard. The next move is, therefore, up to Mr. Roosevelt as our Commander in Chief with the constitutional duty of protecting American lives and American property. It can be nothing less than an instruction to our Navy to seek out and destroy the marauding submarines and Nazi raiders which are making a nullity out of our sea freedom by sinking without provocation American lives and American property. If we are in a state of war, then we must act as if we are in it and without any subterfuge either.

More About Cost-Plus

In a letter published today in our correspondence columns Representative Albert J. Engel, of Michigan, challenges our assertion that his amendment to the Army appropriations bill outlawing cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts in the construction of Army camps would retard defense work. Mr. Engel has done an immense amount of extremely valuable work in assembling data showing comparative construction costs at cantonments built on the cost-plus-fixed-fee basis and the competitive-bid basis respectively. And the evidence tends to support his contention that the competitive-bid basis is much more economical. However, The Post's objections to Mr. Engel's amendment are not based upon cost considerations. We have admitted that the competitive-bid system is preferable on grounds of economy solely. However, we believe that it would definitely retard work on Army camps to make competitive bidding mandatory under present conditions.

Now this opinion is not our own. It is based on the assertions of responsible Army officials. They point out that under the competitive-bid system plans have to be completed before inviting bids, whereas under the cost-plus-fixed-fee a contractor can get started on a project while architects and engineers are still working to complete the plans. Moreover, in the present uncertain state of the labor market and of prices, it is becoming increasingly difficult—in some cases impossible—to get good bids from contractors. Then, too, under a negotiated contract calling for a fixed fee, the Army is able to select experienced contractors who can be counted upon to get the work done properly. That is the first consideration in this emergency. Incidentally, the Quartermaster General, Gen. Somervell, is said to be anxious to get back to the lump-sum-contract system as soon as possible. But unexpected new demands for increased facilities are constantly arising which in the interests of speed require resort to negotiated contracts in place of competitive bids.

Mr. Engel draws some unwarranted deductions from our assertion that the "mounting costs of the defense program are not going to be held in check by trying to make contractors assume risks that they ought not to be expected to shoulder under the unstable conditions now prevailing." That statement is neither in the nature of an assault on the competitive-bid system as such, nor is it inconsistent with advocacy of and belief in the system of free enterprise. All we contend is that under present emergency conditions, practices and principles suited to normal times have to be modified to allow for unusual risks and to speed projects to completion.

Finally, The Post did not suggest, as Mr. Engel implies, that Congress should abandon efforts to enforce economies. On the contrary, we deplored the rise in construction costs, but pointed out that Congress might as well resign itself to the inevitable unless the Government established effective controls over prices of materials and wages. The fact is that we agree heartily with much that Mr. Engel says. But on the important issue of the type of contract best suited to expedite construction at the moment, we disagree. And in doing so we rely upon the opinion of Army experts who ought to know what they are talking about.

GHOST-TOWN

The town has no story—
Blown in wind, dark in rain,
The broken window-pane, the lamppost fallen,
Grass grown green along the trolley-tracks,
And the name of the street is forgotten.

The nation has a story,
Towns are forgotten;
But the story of a nation
Is only the names of a few towns, only
A few battlefields, a few men.
Where are the people gone?
Only the people have a history.
Only the people know what they were last year,
Tell of the old days and the winter's cold.

Where are they gone?
No children cry beneath the angles of roof-tops,
No faces in the lamplight wait
On the street-corner for a girl, or
Feet curled round the curbstones, wait.

Where are they gone?
Beyond the quarry where derricks lace
The sky—the hill where whistles blow from the train.
Slow spills the dust again in the quarry,
Blown in wind, dark in rain, and the name of the street, forgotten.

Thanks For Cartoon

I notice one of your subscribers took exception in a letter to your cartoon of May 27, entitled "Who'll Stop This Beast?" I thank you for the cartoon.

In connection with Nazi acts and policies, our American peoples, yes, and press, too, are not showing the righteous indignation one would expect from citizens of a country founded on the high principles of justice, mercy and truth. Murder, the deliberate destruction of nations by calm, carefully planned and executed killing of the leaders, the highest type, those with influence because of patriotism, and by planned starvation of the masses, lies as a definite policy over a long period of so-called peace, and the oral and printed words of the Nazi chancellor and his principal aides that democracy must end—why, there should be a great moral uprising of Americans and their press against such acts and doctrines. We need more help from the press in overcoming the evil wave coming out of Germany. Again, I thank you for the cartoon.

Urges Diplomatic Break With Germany

I have today written to Secretary of State Cordell Hull urging the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Germany primarily to prevent sabotage. We have sufficient warning from our experience during the last war. Forewarned is forearmed. The last straw is the unwarranted sinking of the S. S. Robin Moor by a Nazi submarine. I think the time has come when the entire staff of German diplomatic and consular agents should be asked to leave this country. Unless such action is taken, we may expect repeated explosions, fires, and destruction of factories, piers and defense material and all responsibility therefor will be laid at the door of the German agents.

O Tempora

Every year the daylight-saving issue is dangled before the angry gaze of the public and made the subject of loud and acrimonious debate. Much gnashing and wailing is heard from all directions. The white-collar lads and lasses fill the air with complaints intended to depict the hardships and horrors entailed by adjustment to the changed conditions.

To save all this turmoil, why change the clock at all. Leave it the way it is. Just send them to work an hour earlier. Ergo, they knock off an hour earlier. Nothing is lost, gained, subtracted or added—except an hour's daylight. Zero still equals zero. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away.

ALFRED DENHAM.
Washington, June 11.

One of your correspondents asks why all the fuss about daylight saving and concludes that changing the clock affects us only psychologically. No doubt he is right.

What does make a difference is where part of a city is on "daylight saving" and part is not, as is the case in Washington, with our staggered Government hours. Considering this condition, why not keep evening programs on as early a schedule as possible? It would save a little electricity, help those on early hours and do no great harm to those on later time. Many events come too late in the evening for many Government workers to attend. One event the other night started at 10 p. m. Broken rest is no help to the defense and there is bound to be a lot of it in Washington without cooperation on this question.

CLARA LOUISE JOHN.
Washington, June 9.

I am positive that I speak for many, many thousands of Washington workers—especially those thousands who are working an extra five hours a week gratis—when I request that this city adopt daylight-saving time. The extra hour of work would then be very much less noticeable.

DALE THUMAN.

Ireland's Dilemma

Edward N. MacCarthy, in The Post of June 9, says it may be impossible for Hitler to invade England owing to the magnitude of the defense, but that Ireland has nothing to offer as a defense, and in the same breath he says Ireland should enter the war.

An Irish mission came here to purchase such arms as would enable Ireland to defend herself, and the mission was turned down. They had pointed out that the 250,000 Irishmen who had volunteered for the defense of their country would, if they got the equipment, make it at least as difficult to invade Ireland as it is to invade England. Of course, the reason the mission failed was because Ireland refused to enter the war.

Mr. MacCarthy, 3,000 miles away, would consign Ireland to the holocaust. Of course, it is possible Hitler may go there, but the Irish cannot be blamed for not inviting him as Mr. MacCarthy would have them do. He apparently blames DeValera, but the latter is merely the prime minister of a country whose people are determined 99 per cent to keep out of war, and, since the democratic process prevails there, Mr. De Valera can do nothing about it even if he wanted to.

Apart from these considerations, there are, in another portion of Ireland, which flies the British flag, nearly half a million Irishmen who at this moment are virtually disfranchised because of their religion, and it is small wonder the Irish should be skeptical about the high-falutin' war aims of England.

Rep. Engel Takes Issue With 'Cost-Plus'

(The following letter is discussed in an editorial entitled "More About Cost-Plus" on this page today.)

In the interest of keeping the record straight I find it necessary to write you pointing out the misunderstanding which underlies your opposition to my amendment outlawing "cost-plus-fixed-fee" contracts in the construction of Army camps, as outlined in the editorial, "Cost-Plus," in The Post of June 9.

In this editorial you concede the wasteful evils of the "cost-plus" basis of building camps, but you characterize my amendment as a "dangerously obstructionist remedy." You add that the wasteful "cost-plus" method makes "it possible to speed up defense projects."

If my amendment was in effect "obstructionist" or if outlawing of the "cost-plus" system delayed building of needed camps, I would be the first to abandon it. My purpose is to make our national defense effort more efficient, speedy and economical—not to obstruct it. But the evidence does not bear out your contentions. Indeed, there is no evidence demonstrating that greater delay is inherent in following a competitive basis than is the wasteful "cost-plus" basis.

Since your editorial appeared, certain opinions have been inserted into the Congressional Record to the effect that forbidding "cost-plus" contracts would retard defense work. These are mere opinions, unbuttressed by facts. The answer to the assertion that Army camps cannot be built speedily, unless admittedly wasteful "cost-plus" contracts are permitted, is that it has been done and is being done right now. Take the case of Camp Dix. It was built by 14 separate contractors running all the way from a contract for $5,000,000 on down. It cost $9,800 to build a 63-man barracks at Dix against $17,364 at Meade for the same kind of building. Meade was on a "cost-plus" basis; Dix on a competitive-bid basis. Construction at Camp Dix has been as speedy, if not speedier, than at camps where "cost-plus" was used. The same is true at Camp Jackson, S. C.

Rather than delay the construction of Army camps, the "competitive-bid" method would encourage speed, since any delay would react disadvantageously to the contractor and thus he would push the job harder than if the excess cost for delay came out of the taxpayers' pockets. Representative Case in the debate in the House last Friday (page 4946 Congressional Record) cited actual instances where the competive-bid basis contributed to the speed of construction. Efficiency and economy go hand in hand. They are not the enemies you picture them.

So much for the argument about delay. The remainder of your argument is to the effect that the Government should not try "to make contractors assume risks that they ought not to be expected to shoulder under the unstable conditions now prevailing." This is an amazing contention to come from a newspaper which in the past has been so stanch an advocate of a free-enterprise system. It is an assault on the principle of the "competitive-bid" basis of letting contracts.

If The Post is correct in this contention, then no "competitive-bid" contracts should be awarded during this period. In reply to that let me quote the words of Representative Thomason (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Military Affairs Subcommittee investigating the Army camps, who said that a "cost-plus or cost-plus-fixed-fee contract is almost an indefensible thing," adding, "I do not care whether it is in municipal government or State government or Federal Government, a cost-plus contract as we knew it in World War I is almost invariably an invitation to favoritism and profiteering." Surely the insurance-writing activities of Boss Crump of Tennessee sustain that contention.

For the sake of the argument, however, let us concede that the contractor should receive protection against increased labor and material costs. My amendment would not forbid such protection for the contractor. Under it a contract could be made which would permit an additional payment to take care of subsequent increases in wage rates and material costs.

As a matter of fact, inefficiency—not wage rates—underlie the waste of some $250,000,000 in the construction of an Army camp program costing $800,000,000. At Camp Dix, for instance, wage rates were substantially higher than at camps on the "cost-plus" basis, as I demonstrated to the House on June 2.

I thoroughly disagree with your suggestion that Congress abandon efforts to enforce economies and "resign itself to witnessing a steady rise in the cost of defense projects." For it to do so would be to abdicate the responsibility as guardian of the purse strings with which it is charged by the Constitution and the voters. Certainly such suggestions discourage sincere efforts to see that every dollar is spent wisely and well.

Latin Vs. Beans

After nine years' exposure to Latin we can't say much for it. Latin never put any beans on our plate, as the saying goes, and this seems to be a bean-conscious world. Now, in our declining years, we regret that we did not pay more attention to beans and less to Caesar and Horace. It's the beans that count, boys.

This is not to imply that we did not enjoy our nine years of Latin. On the contrary it was a vastly pleasant, if brief, interlude in a world where beans mean more than Cicero. Perhaps this is as it should be. If Latin, God forbid, were put forth as something socially and economically indispensable, something worth while, our minds would be diverted from such outstanding intellectual pursuits as building subways, manufacturing chewing gum and laying out Army camps.

It is encouraging, therefore, to note that our schools and colleges gradually have dropped all mention of Latin from their curricula. This notable academic achievement gives our boys and girls additional time to study the rudiments of such spiritual-uplifting topics as the stock market and economics, without which no country can be truly civilized. A knowledge of these subjects leads inevitably to an acquisition of great quantities of beans, the amount of the acquisition giving the acquisitor his rating in society.

This American aversion to the study of Latin is not only understandable but quite sensible. For the average student Latin is a horrible ordeal and a sheer waste of time. We know college graduates who, after four years of Latin, know a few phrases such as caveat emptor and de facto, but on the whole they would have been better off playing ping-pong or building up a banana route, the former bringing health and the latter a modicum of beans.

The current antipathy toward Latin is a natural growth of the American's attitude toward life, an attitude ingrained in us from birth. A distinct preference to beans over Latin is part of our precious heritage. With the receipt of our first lollypop, circa aetatem 3 or 4, we are taught to specialize in beans.

As a matter of fact, have you ever seen a Latin scholar with any appreciable amount of beans on hand? We never have witnessed that phenomenon. Latin and beans, apparently, do not go well together. A positive distaste for Latin, in fact, seems to give a man added talents for garnering beans, through which process he carves a high niche in the social order.

Yes, we regret those many hours spent with Cicero and Horace. Those boys not only distracted us from the worth-while course of amassing a fortune but actually, on one occasion, got us into trouble.

In the lush days of the twenties we knew a boob who was making money faster than he could spend it as a bond salesman. We decided to become a bond salesman and forthwith applied for a job. While the sales manager talked, our mind drifted to the first person singular, pluperfect subjunctive, of an irregular verb. We were momentarily baffled, but after three or four minutes it came to us. Whereupon, we let out a yell that could be heard all over the office. Needless to say we were summarily ejected, with the aid of three cops and two alienists.

That episode terminated our commercial career and we blame it all on Latin. Had it not been for that intriguing irregular verb we might have had plenty of beans on the plate today.

In the opinion of the uninitiated, a knowledge of Latin is a presumption of extraordinary mentality and depth of knowledge. By the same token, the Latin scholar is awed in the presence of the economist or industrialist, both of whom have rare gifts for making money by the simple process of bamboozling the unthinking. Both groups are kidding the innocent bystanders.

The Latin scholar, to mention only one of his more subtle methods of impressing the public with his intelligence, insists that the classics be read in the vernacular. In our opinion, this is nonsense. But he gets away with it in the sordid quarters of life where men talk of stocks and struggle for dollars. The commercial group, to be sure, thinks the Latin student has something on the ball, whereas, in fact, he is merely beating them at their own game of kidding the public.

Thus, inevitably, most men, at some time in life, grow out of the bean stage and acquire an obsession for Latin, or its equivalent. Invariably, it is too late. Their minds are full of beans and there is no room for Latin. They are forced to trod along the dull road of frustration and confine their efforts to making more beans for their plates.

The Latin student, on the other hand, born with a keen sense of the futility of life, is necessarily content with his lot and feels smug in the knowledge that he has something no one can take away, despite the fact that that "something" has little or no value. But you can take away beans, you know, and beans have caused war and Latin never has.

British Labor Party

By G. D. H. Cole

(Mr. Cole is a leading figure and writer in the British labor movement. He is at present chairman of the Social Reconstruction Survey.)

Its Relation To England's War Effort

DURING the years between the two great wars, British Labor was the party which stood, above all others, for peace and international understanding. Yet during the period immediately before the outbreak of the present war, Labor was the party which most decisively stood out against the policy of appeasement and urged resistance to the growing menace of dictatorship—first in Manchukuo and China, then in Spain, and thereafter in one country after another, as the fascist powers more and more plainly showed their hand.

There is nothing inconsistent in this. Up to the advent of Hitler, the Labor Party stood for making the League of Nations into a real league of peoples. When the Nazi menace became too plain to be disregarded, Labor saw in a league of peace-loving peoples, armed against aggression, the best hope of preventing world war, and in prompt and energetic resistance to small aggressions the best hope of checking the dictators before they had grown too strong. Finally, when the policy of appeasement had revealed itself as the lamentable failure it was always doomed to be, and the Chamberlain government reluctantly resorted to war, British Labor at once gave assurance of its full support for all measures necessary to stimulate the war effort.

It was in no sense Labor's fault that so little was done during the early months of the conflict to organize the nation for war. The Chamberlain government, reluctant to interfere with foreign trade or the workings of private enterprise, or to recognize the magnitude of the financial effort that war needed, and astonishingly underestimating the striking power of the German forces, went slowly. It was left to the employers to organize factories for war output; and the employers, following the same line as the government, made very few demands upon the workers, either for relaxation of trade union customs or for any major alterations in the conditions of labor.

This situation continued up to the eve of the final French collapse. Only when the new Churchill government took office, in the midst of the disasters of the spring of 1940, can the economic effort of war be said really to have begun. The loss of equipment in France, the imminent danger of invasion during the summer months, and the dislocation of supplies and markets due to the Nazi conquest of western Europe then forced drastic reorganization of the war economy; and before there could be time for this reorganization to take effect, the workers had to "go to it" with a will in order to lift the country out of its defenseless condition and produce at once more planes to resist the expected onslaught from the air.

DURING the summer of 1940, Great Britain was saved by this remarkable "workman's battle." Churchill's leadership, reinforced by that of Bevin and Morrison, the most influential men representing the industrial and political wings of the Labor movement, played a valuable and inspiring part. But no leadership could have availed without the magnificent mass response of the ordinary people. The workers in the factories made, at a truly astonishing speed, the sorely needed munitions which enabled the first Battle of Britain to be won.

It was notable during these months that the initiative in introducing dilution of labor, and in forsaking for the time trade-union rules and customs which might have impeded the war effort, came very largely from trade unionists themselves and that many employers, though not of course all, were slow in adapting their factories to meet the changing needs of war. Of all the hundred or so trade unions directly concerned with war production, I can think of but very few instances in which there was any reluctance on the labor side in agreeing to changes needed in the interests of higher output; and these few were only among small groups here and there. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the necessary changes were made without any difficulty—often without even going through the procedure laid down by emergency law as a safeguard for trade-union interests. The workers through those summer months labored for prodigiously long hours, often under exceedingly difficult conditions; and it is beyond doubt that their labors averted defeat.

An effort of this character could not, however, in the very nature of things, be more than temporary. It is beyond human power to work at full strain for very long hours month after month without showing the effects of weariness. For the further phases of the struggle against Nazism the need was above all else for improved organization of the economic side of the war, both in its labor aspect and in the sphere of factory control and the right direction of productive activity. In my view, the government made a mistake at this point in not taking the main war factories completely under public control and replacing the contract system by direct state orders as to what should be produced in each establishment. That is a matter of opinion: what is beyond dispute is that the major tasks last winter were those of increasing the effectiveness of the limited supply of highly skilled labor by distributing it better between different industries and factories, and the reinforcement of this supply by better methods of training and by a great extension of training facilities generally.

BOTH these tasks fell mainly to Ernest Bevin as minister of labor and national service; and he had also the main part in the task of deciding what men should be called up for military service and who should be left to man the workshops. Naturally, the redistribution of the skilled-labor force involved many delicate problems and the assumption of extensive compulsory powers. Men had to be persuaded, or forced, to go and work under highly unpleasant or dangerous conditions or at a considerable sacrifice of incomes. Ernest Bevin's policy was, throughout, to make use of compulsion only in the very last resort; and again, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the workers did what was required of them without being compelled, even when the sacrifices were very great. Bevin's prestige doubtless counted for much; but what counted for much more was the generally diffused sense that Great Britain was involved in a life-and-death struggle in which defeat would mean the loss of all the democratic freedoms so painfully won by long years of endeavor.

Training was much less successfully tackled; and only now are the measures for intensive mass training getting properly into their stride. One great reason for this was the shortage of machine tools, which involved a contest for every available machine between those who wanted them for training and those who wanted to use them for increasing immediate war output. The third problem, that of deciding who shall be released for military service and who reserved for work on the home front, has of course to be tackled continually afresh as the relative urgency of war needs changes. On the whole, it has been tackled with a remarkable absence of serious friction.

In general, then, it can safely be said that, on the economic side, Labor has played a very notable part in the war effort, especially since the advent of the Churchill - Labor government. This smoothness of reorganization would have been utterly impossible but for the strong position held by trade unionism in Great Britain and but for the fact that over by far the greater part of the war industries the recognition of trade-unionism and collective bargaining is taken by the majority of employers as a matter of course. This situation has its dangers; for it is apt to mean that on certain issues employers and workers come to terms with too little regard for the common interest of the whole people. But for wartime transformation of the national economy under a coalition government representing both Conservatives and Labor it has very evident advantages.

BUT, it may be asked, to what extent does the Churchill-Labor government represent the Conservatives who are clearly much less solidly behind it than the Labor Party? The answer is that it does and it does not. It was disliked at the time of its formation and is still disliked by many Conservatives—especially by many of the "business tories." But from the moment when Churchill was offered and accepted the leadership of the Conservative Party, there was an implied understanding that Labor's political influence would not be used during the war for any attack on the foundations of capitalist enterprise; and on the basis of this understanding most Conservative politicians, and still more businessmen, were prepared to back the government in any measures which it deemed, within this understanding, necessary for the successful prosecution of the war.

To the Labor politicians, on the other hand, and to the more active members of the Labor rank and file, this implicit undertaking was bound to be distasteful, to say the least of it. Yet they tacitly accepted it—even to the extent that there practically ceased to be a House of Commons opposition or any vocal criticism of the government's policies save from the Communists and a few scattered dissidents belonging to such Socialist factions as the Clydeside Independent Labor Party. Personally, I regret this silence as having gone too far, thereby impeding, instead of helping, the war effort; for I believe that the presence of a constructive opposition is essential for keeping the government departments well informed about their own mistakes and about the state of public opinion. But the motives behind the Labor Party's self-denying ordinance were unexceptionable. The Labor leaders and the great majority of their followers alike believed firmly that the defeat of Hitler mattered immeasurably more than anything else.

THIS has meant, unfortunately, that Labor's peace aims, though they have been clearly stated on plenty of occasions, have not received any great attention. The Labor Party has hesitated, in this as in other matters, to press any question that might cause the government to be embarrassed. Labor stands clearly for a peace devoid of vindictiveness, and based on the creation of a supra-national authority in Europe strong enough to override national ambitions and totalitarian aspirations of every sort. It will press hard for such a peace when the time comes, and will not for a moment abandon its advocacy of the principles on which alone such a peace can be founded. But when it has had to choose between having its voice half stifled and doing anything that might be regarded as damaging to the immediate war effort, it has let itself be stifled sooner than run any risks of even appearing to say anything that might "encourage the enemy."

This is British Labor's war record—one easily misrepresented or misunderstood, but in its main outlines essentially right and practical. If it often disappoints those who, like myself, ardently wish for a stronger lead from Labor towards the better world I want to help in building up, let us remember all the time that the first essential is victory, and that a great party cannot say anything that might jeopardize the unity of the anti-Nazi forces at a time when every possible help is needed in beating back from the whole world a danger which threatens death to every sort of public decency and freedom and democratic aspiration.

General Udet

By K. K. Doberer

He 'Missed The Boat'

BEFORE THE German occupation of Norway there were mysterious airplanes of "unknown nationality" heard and seen flying over lonely fjords, isolated islands and over the white wastes of the north. Hitler's cartographers, his heralds of invasion, were on the way.

Then, not too many understood the signs fully. But in the meantime the lesson has been learned. When the ghost flyers, the air planes of "unknown nationality," began to circle over Greenland, we understood what was going on. The President of the United States took measures to counteract the aspects of invasion. Now American warships are on the way. General Udet was too late for Greenland.

In April, 1940, the Berlin Militarwochenblatt, the paper of the German army, announced the promotion of the lieutenant general, Ernst Udet, to a general of the German air force. Who is this General Udet? Why was he promoted? And for what task was he selected?

In the Great War Udet was a fighter pilot. He came back alive from the struggle primarily because the great French air ace, Guynemer, chivalrously spared his life in an air combat, after Udet's machine gun had developed loading trouble. After the Great War he played the game of fortune hunter, waiting for his big chance. In 1930, when it seemed as if the democratic wing would win in Germany, Udet joined the "Sturmvogel," the anti-Nazi Democratic Aero Club. But when the wind began to blow from the other direction, Udet quickly changed his position. He saw big business coming. And soon Udet was to play his part in Hitler's plan of world domination.

After Hitler came to power, he sent Udet on a "film expedition" to Greenland. This "film expedition" was from several points of view very interesting. The use of aircraft, both of land plane and seaplane types, was remarkable. Strange it was for a "film expedition," which had ostensibly gone to make travel movies, to chart the depth of the sea in the fjord. And it would have seemed strange to you, this studying of weather conditions, this search for landing facilities on sea and land. You might have suspected they were prospecting for U-boat bases, for seaplane bases and for landing grounds. But the natives of Greenland were not trained to judge such things. They, like the people of Oslo, were pleased by the nice German music.

The "film expedition" brought back for the suspicious world some nice movies, indeed, and for the Fuehrer all the material necessary to prepare for the day of the invasion of Greenland.

In 1940 the time seemed ripe to turn the plans into reality, to prepare the invasion of Greenland by sea and air. And Udet advanced quickly to a general of the German air force. He was looking forward for his big chance to invade a country whose every nook and cranny he himself had ferreted out.

The day seemed near, but Roosevelt acted. And Hitler's chance, and Udet's, too, vanished into thin air.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Of Steve Clow, Blackmailer

A VERY SMALL and obscure note in the paper reports the death in Bellevue Hospital of Steve Clow, who, in his heyday, about 20 years ago, seemed to have established beyond challenge and for all time the title of dirtiest American. He was a blackmailer along Broadway operating a nasty little sheet which dealt almost exclusively with scandal and rumor and filth. But he finally made a false move and was sent to prison on a Federal charge after Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce had given testimony against him—a public service for which that charming and inveterate bride has never received due recognition and gratitude. Newspaper reporters who were on the job at the time understood that another eminent American lady, the sister of a powerful international financier, likewise had been subjected to annoyance by Clow, but had preferred not to prosecute lest in refuting the slanders she should only give them wider circulation.

PEGLER

AFTER his graduation from prison Clow was no longer the ogre who had haunted persons of prominence in town, although it may be presumed that in a petty way he continued to live by blackmail.

About a year ago a citizen got a letter from him whining for money, and after a few weeks this was followed by another threatening to expose some dreadful secret. That was one of Clow's variations. Even when he had nothing to expose he would threaten, on the strength of the tradition of the night clubs and the underworld, that nine out of 10 human beings have had "trouble" of some kind.

Some old-timers probably will vote for Col. William D'Alton Mann, of the Old Town Topics, but he was just a cur, whereas Clow was all of that and a purveyor of filth as well. Up to his time he was the most versatile and diligent rotter of them all, and it must have depressed him horribly in his later years to see in print material which made his foulest and proudest efforts seem demure if not a little priggish.

HE WAS in operation along Broadway during the last war, but his limitations may be judged by the fact that it never occurred to him to take up patriotism as a racket. But in those days we all thought the current automobiles were just about the last word, too, and it only goes to show that the world does move, not only forward but downward, too. In Clow's time his sort of thing was strictly barred from regular journalism, and a man in his line had to run his own publication. His little paper was a sort of journalistic segregated district.

Steve was indirectly responsible for the enormous exploitation of the social and carnal affairs of criminals and the drunken rich and the well-dressed moocher as news. It was Steve Clow who caught the late Phil Paine, then managing editor of the New York Daily News, in a mood of black despair after the death of Mrs. Paine and persuaded him to visit a night club for the first time back when prohibition was young. Phil was a naive rube from Union City, N. J., who did not smoke or drink and had never met an actress. He glamorized persons of the type known as celebrities because he actually thought them glamorous. Phil was a marvelously successful editor because his own attitude toward this set was that of the newspaper reader.

CLOW had met Paine some time before, and he now took him in tow to cheer him. Phil met through Clow some of the more vicious criminals of the day who were then running speakeasies in the side streets off Broadway, and Phil began to turn up stories wherever he went, some of which may have lacked news merit according to ordinary standards. But none of which lacked circulation value. And Phil first hit upon the idea of assigning a reporter, with an expense account, to the night club beat—the real beginning of that phase of our journalism.

He even became a celebrity himself—the ambition of all true rubes—and delighted to be recognized by underworld characters as he walked into some den for his coffee and preserved figs in cream at night. It gave him pleasure, also, to sit with some famous pretty in the ringside at the old Garden, where he would edit the first edition in public and slip the corrections and orders to Paul Gallico in the working press for transmission to the shop over the fight wire.

OF COURSE Paine knew Clow was a blackmailer and crook of various gifts, but a reporter doesn't demand social references from a contact or news source and, anyway, Phil shoved off on his own career as a well-known man about town.

Clow just lived too long. By the time he died developments in the craft had made him seem almost decent, and this must have been a bitter end for a man who for so long a time had stood alone.

Navy Redubs Its Liners

By John G. Norris

Rechristenings

The queen and crown princesses of the American Merchant Marine, transferred to the Navy for conversion into troop transports, yesterday were renamed for locations rich in American tradition.

The S. S. America, pride of the Nation's passenger fleet, becomes the U. S. S. West Point, named for the United States Military Academy. Two other major vessels of the former transatlantic service, the S. S. Washington and the S. S. Manhattan, were renamed the U. S. S. Mount Vernon and the U. S. S. Wakefield, respectively, for the home and birthplace of George Washington.

At the same time, the Army announced that it is discontinuing the transportation of the families, household goods and automobiles of military personnel to overseas garrisons on transports or on commercial ships at Government expense.

No explanation was given but it is understood the action was taken principally because of the shipping shortage. Lack of accommodations at the expanding overseas bases and possible danger of air raids in case of war may also have been a factor. Some months ago, the families of Army and Navy personnel in the Philippines were sent home.

The three former luxury liners being converted to naval use will bring the number of Navy transports to 22, where two years ago there were but 2 or 3. Five former destroyers, rebuilt into fast troops carriers, and the famous World War transport George Washington are included in the total. The Army itself has about 30 transports.

Other defense developments of the day were:

The Army announced the mass promotions of 237 majors to the temporary rank of lieutenant colonel and 284 captains to the permanent rank of major.

Establishment of five additional Air Corps schools, part of the program to step up pilot training from 12,000 to 30,000 a year, was announced. The new schools will be at Midland, Tex.; Victorville, Calif.; Sebring, Fla.; Luobock, Tex., and Higley, Ariz.

The Navy named Rear Admiral Felix X. Gygax, now commanding cruiser division 3, to be commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard. He succeeds Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, who will become commandant of the Fifth Naval Dsitrict and the Norfolk naval operating base.

A $2,882,400 program to fence in important storage areas at 95 Army posts is planned by the War Department. Ten-foot, nonclimbable fences, flood-lighted at intervals, are planned at Fort Myer, Fort Belvoir and Arlington Cantonment, Va., among the other posts.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Robin Moor

THE REPORT of the American Consul, Mr. Linthicum, and the official comment by the Undersecretary of State, Mr. Welles, do not in themselves provide a sufficient basis of fact on which a final judgment can be reached as to just what course the United States should adopt. This should be as plain to those who have been frivolously hoping for an "incident" to inflame American opinion as to those who, without bothering to study the question, have already concluded that the case of the Robin Moor is a mere incident. For even if, as seems most probable, the consular report is fully substantiated, the question still to be decided is what measures are called for.

LIPPMANN

Some further inquiry is needed, and then a searching examination of the full facts, their meaning, and their consequences. For the present, therefore, the business of the citizen is to fix clearly in mind the known facts, to determine what facts have still to be established and then to judge them. For the judgment which the American people do reach may well be momentous, whatever it is decided to do or it is decided to refrain from doing.

THERE IS NO doubt that the Robin Moor was an American merchant ship. According to Undersecretary Welles, the ship's manifest will show that her cargo was consistent with the provisions of the Neutrality Act. The report of the consul does not make it altogether clear what effort, if any, the commander of the submarine made to verify the manifest. It does not, however, appear that he made any investigation of the ship itself before deciding to sink her. Therefore, there can be no dispute about the cargo's being that which is described in the ship's manifest.

There is no doubt that this American ship carrying a lawful cargo was deliberately sunk by a submarine in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean at a point approximately halfway between Dakar in French Africa and Natal in Brazil. The sinking occurred thousands of miles from the combat zone as defined by the President's proclamation under the Neutrality Act. It occurred thousands of miles outside of the war zone as defined and proclaimed by Germany. There is no doubt that the ship was sunk without providing for the safety of the crew and the passengers, and it seems extremely probable, though that is not yet certain, that many perished.

THE AMERICAN CONSUL reports on the sworn testimony of the survivors that "the commander and the submarine were German." Though this is not flatly denied in Berlin, doubts have been raised, and it is just conceivable that the submarine may have belonged to some other power in the Axis or under its control.

What is not conceivable is that the submarine was British. For while Senator Nye has rushed into print with this charge, not even Berlin had thought of that though perhaps Berlin may yet try to make what it can of Senator Nye's helpful suggestion. The probabilities are very great, however, that Berlin realizes that the full testimony of the survivors will establish beyond all reasonable doubt, as it has already in the mind of the American consul, that the submarine was under German operation.

THE ELEMENTARY facts are, however, only the foundation for the main inquiry which must turn, it would seem, on the following considerations:

If a German submarine has without visit and search and without providing for the safety of the crew sunk a merchant ship while on a lawful voyage in the South Atlantic, then the United States Government is faced with the practical question of how to make the high seas secure. The question must be answered convincingly. For if no guaranties of security are given to merchant ships, the example of what happened to the crew of the Robin Moor will tend to paralyze American shipping throughout the world. We cannot expect, nor can we ask, crews to take ships from American ports into oceans infested with submarines and provide no answering protection.

If the sinking of the Robin Moor was not only a deliberate act of the commander, which is certain, but also a deliberate act of his government, then the purpose of the action was to paralyze shipping still further by terrorizing crews and ship owners. A failure on the part of our Government to counteract this terrorism decisively will drive American shipping off the seas. Ships cannot sail the oceans if they are unarmed and unprotected against the fate of the Robin Moor. No verbal assurances from the Axis Powers will, moreover, reestablish the necessary confidence which the crews are entitled to have, which even British seamen have when they put to sea under the protection of the British navy.

THE SCENE of the sinking is also a matter of great consequence. The Robin Moor was destroyed between Dakar and Natal, in the narrow seas through which all shipping must pass from the North Atlantic to the South Atlantic, from North America to South America and from Europe to South America. The submarine was in easy range of the French naval base at Dakar. Our nearest base is perhaps five times as far away. Could there be a more conclusive demonstration that if the Axis dominates Europe and Africa, it will be in a position to dominate all the trade routes and all the military supply lines between North and South America—and that once the Axis were established there, we should have to abandon all thought of hemisphere defense or we should have to fight an offensive war to reconquer the strategic control of the Atlantic Ocean.

For that reason all of South America will watch with intense concern our response to this event. Let us have no illusions about it. If now, with the British fleet, we do not make secure the seas on which depend all hemisphere defense and collaboration, then we shall not be believed in South America or anywhere else when we proclaim our intentions to defend the Western Hemisphere.

THE EVENT indicates also what many have for some time foreseen: that the great issue is not whether we shall convoy goods to Britain but whether we will maintain the control of the Atlantic. When the Robin Moor was sunk in contravention of all law, we had in fact, as respects that ship and its crew and any other ship and any other crew which might go to sea, lost control of the Atlantic Ocean. The question to be studied and decided is how the security of the Atlantic is to be restored.

Once the facts are established, therefore, the question before us will then be whether there is any form of guaranty that we can rely upon—rely upon so that we have a right to send ships to sea—without using the Navy to guarantee the freedom of the seas under international law. If such a reliable guaranty can be found, the case of the Robin Moor will be an incident. But if no guaranty can be given that can be accepted, then it is not an incident but an issue of the greatest gravity.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 13.—Evidence that the great majority of American voters are dissatisfied with much of the Nation's labor union leadership—that the public thinks labor leaders have been "dragging their feet" instead of helping the defense effort—comes from a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The direction of public opinion was apparent three months ago in a previous Institute survey. At that time only 18 per cent of those interviewed thought labor leaders were doing "as much as they should" to speed defense.

Instead of improving labor's standing with the public, however, events of recent weeks have made public opinion even more dissatisfied.

Interviewing in the present survey was largely completed before the Nation read of the strike at the North American Aviation Co. at Inglewood, Calif., early this week, where important Army plane contracts were tied up for several days. But as of the first week in June the Institute survey shows only 12 persons in every 100 saying labor leaders are doing "as much as they should."

From labor's point of view, the significance of this trend lies in the fact that a dissatisfied and critical public may indorse restrictive measures aimed at all labor, which the public might not otherwise approve.

Two general reservations regarding public opinion need to be made at this point: First, the voters' comments show that many of them are making a distinction between "labor leaders" and members of labor unions. Many said they thought the average union man "would like to do all he could" to keep defense goods rolling.

Second, public criticism of defense bottlenecks is not limited to the unions. Business and industrial management comes in for blame from many, as does the Government itself. But whereas a small majority of those with opinions think "business" is doing its share, less than one in six hands similar credit to labor leadership.

The questions asked in the present survey were:

"Do you think labor union leaders are helping the national defense production program as much as they should?"

"Do you think industrial (business) leaders are helping as much as they should?"

The replies were

Labor leaders helping	12%
Labor leaders not helping	78
Undecided	10
Industrial leaders helping	42
Industrial leaders not helping	41
Undecided	17

Previous Institute studies have shown that the rank and file of labor union members themselves are by no means contented with the situation.

Following are the divisions of opinion in today's survey, according to major occupational groups, with skilled, semiskilled and unskilled working groups combined and including nonunion as well as union men and their wives:

Do you think labor union leaders are helping the national defense production program as much as they should?

	Yes.	No.	Undecided.
Professional and Business Groups	8%	86%	6%
White-Collar Employes	10	83	7
Skilled, Semi-Skilled and Unskilled (both union and nounion)	19	70	11
Farm Groups	7	80	13

Service Men Invited to Hear Mount Vernon Place Concert

(Editor's note: Cognizant of the problem of furnishing social, recreational and religious activities for service men during their weekends away from adjoining camps, many churches are sponsoring special programs, in addition to cooperating with the United Service Organizations' work. This weekly column's purpose will be to inform about religion's part in the national emergency. One week we may tell you about chaplains' work, another week about lads of your congregation who've been drafted.)

Another Washington church tonight will take steps toward providing weekend activities for service men, as Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church sponsors a concert in Mount Vernon Place Square, Ninth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, at 8 p. m.

In addition to the congregation, the cooperating groups will include the District WPA music project, Metropolitan Police Department and others. The June 21 program will include music and a tabloid play under the direction of Deane Shure, of Mount Vernon Church. He is a widely known organist-composer. Arnold Lovejoy, WPA music project director, will present the June 28 program.

The women's organizations of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church will again sponor a program for service men tonight at the Fellowship House, Thirty-sixth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. The program will include a light supper, followed by dancing and other entertainment. Mrs. James M. Drysdale is general chairman of the steering committee that helps make arrangements for having the camps transport about 100 men to Fellowship House on Saturday nights.

All draft-age men of the Washington Stake (Diocese) of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints are urged to attend a special meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at the Mormon Chapel, Sixteenth and Columbia Road Northwest. Hugh Brown, former British Mormon Mission president will speak. He also will speak tomorrow at 7 p. m.

Bright Slips, Drapes, Warm Up Old Rooms

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IT isn't really possessions that make a home beautiful, that endear it to us. It is living there that leaves a very special radiance hovering about its loved, worn walls.

That's what is missing in brand-new rooms . . . they may be ever so perfect, but until they have seen a family through tears and triumphs, delights and defeats, they never really come to life.

That's one of the reasons we always like the idea of home weddings when it's possible—yes, and home funerals, too. They belong to the proper growing up of houses as well as of people. We even can regret the fact, on sentimental grounds though not the scientific, that the old home is no longer the place where the babies are born—but we will concede that function to the hospital!

Anyway, Mrs. R. B., who writes for help with her decoration problems, recognizes that there's more to it than that, for she explains that she's trying to achieve cheer and friendliness and warmth. "Things" won't do that, of course, but she knows that they can provide a congenial background for life, and that's what she's working toward.

She's moving to a house with a north living room that seems gloomy, and to top it off she has to use a dark brown rug and her old dark brown upholstered furniture, but she can slip cover that and asks about fabrics and colors. She also wants new draperies. What sort of extra chair should she choose? What color for walls? What accessories?

Why not have the walls done in a sunny light yellow—that would brighten things up a lot. Then choose a gayly-flowered cretonne or sateen with lots of yellow in it—use this for draperies over yellow sheer curtains, which will make the room seem sunny even on dark days and give it a warm glow.

Slip cover all the upholstered pieces in this same fabric—being sure to get a fast-color washable material. The extra chair might be nice in turquoise leather—washable too, of course. Or turquoise mohair or textural fabric. For accessories use turquoise blue and starchy whites.

Girl Turns to Design Through Clothes Needs, Wins Second Place in National Fashion Contest

Ann Myers' Blazer Suit Will Be Made A Fall Fashion

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

A need in her own wardrobe set Miss Ann Myers, 17-year-old Roosevelt High School graduate, out to design the kind of suit she had always wanted.

Ann recently won the second prize in the National Back-to-School Fashion Contest sponsored by a local store and Parents' Magazine. She had never had any decided ambition for specializing along the line of designing, but she did feel that the kind of outfit she desired was typical of what other high school girls would like.

"I have always wanted a blazer type jacket like the ones I have seen my Canadian sisters wear at camp," said Ann. She went on to explain that she has gone to the same camp in Canada for several summers. The girls always wore English tweed blazer jackets with bound edges. "These seemed to be youthful, easy to wear and particularly suitable for the small girl hard to fit," said Ann.

Had Budget in View

When Ann tried to find the same type of outfit back in the States she discovered that the good-looking, clean-cut ones were always far out of a reasonable price range. She knew, however, that her ideas were practical and that similar costumes ought to be available for her budget-wise school mates.

The complete outfit which Ann designed is a four-piece checkered costume in blue on a beige background. The blazer jacket with a matching waistcoat and hat is worn over a pleated skirt. "Pleated skirts," said Ann, "are suitable for almost all high school girls because they build them out in the right places."

In this performance of designing something practical for herself, Ann is following in the footsteps of foremost fashion designers—many of whom are known by the fact that they wear their own creations best.

To Be Manufactured

Unlike many designers who have had to start the hard way, however, Ann will get to see her outfit made up immediately as an authentic Hi-School Board Fashion. It will be featured in the September issue of Parents' Magazine and promoted by stores throughout the country.

Ann will be taken to New York June 24 to receive her prize at the Parents' Magazine Semi-annual Fashion Show. After that she will be a junior counselor at Camp Ingelstane, in Stony Lake, Ontario, Canada. And after that more education, perhaps, to be followed by a stab at a newspaper job. She has already had several news contributions accepted.

"Local girl makes good" rings true once more as Ann Myers (above) shows a sketch of the suit that won her second place in the National Back-to-High-School Fashion Contest. The outfit is a four-piece checkered ensemble in blue and beige with a pleated skirt topped by a matching hat, waistcoat, and Ann's favorite blazer-style jacket. It will be made up into an authentic fall fashion and featured in stores throughout the country

Tell Fortunes At Parties

FORTUNE-TELLING'S the magic way to "win friends and influence people!" For everyone, from your best beau to your girl friends, has a question to ask of fate. When you can answer with the clever fortune, "Card Oracles," you make a hit!"

"Will my love be true?" your beau may ask—and that's a question over which you look very mysterious, of course! Have him shuffle and cut the cards, then lay the top 13 on the table, face up. A Queen of Hearts appears? "True she is!"

"Should I say yes to his proposal?" Have the enquirer draw five cards with her left hand. A Jack of Diamonds among them? "Yes!"

And who isn't interested in what's just around the corner? After the fortune-seeker has shuffled and cut the cards lay out the top three. If a black Jack appears: "Beware! An enemy."

You're the belle of any date or party when you can tell fortunes—whether in the cards, tea leaves or by horoscope!

Our 40-page booklet, LET ME TELL YOUR FORTUNE, explains lots of ways to tell clever fortunes in the cards, gives meanings of all the cards in the deck. Also shows how to tell fortunes in tea leaves, dominoes, dice. A horoscope for every month, tips on "crystal gazing."

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Let Me Tell Your Fortune," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Forbidden Perfume Now Finds Way to American Stores

For years, habitual globe-trotters have been buying the most seductive perfumes they could find in all parts of the world. From Paris and Bombay—from Singapore, Havana, and South America, they brought back a bottle or two at a time. These unusual and lasting fragrances became known and sought after by American women. But they could not be replenished here.

A perfume of this type is "Tabu"—long forbidden here but now for sale at one of the local stores. "Tabu"—an almost indescribable aroma—has the smouldering notes of jasmine and sandalwood. This very sophisticated perfume is made of natural aromatics.

Group of Young Women, With Small Apartments And Moderate Incomes, Wish to Extend Friendly Hospitality to 'Lost-Looking Draftees.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are a group of young women and we would like your advice and suggestions on a topic we have been discussing among ourselves. We have seen the lost-looking draftees wandering around town,—boys who look like our brothers, our boy friends or the kid next door; boys who are obviously homesick. We would like to have a group of them,—say, six or eight,—in on Sunday evenings for supper, to play bridge, to listen to recordings, etc.

In other words, we want to be neighborly. All of us have beaux of our own. It definitely would not be a matter of trying to meet new men. We have brothers and men friends we might include in the gatherings, just to make it more comfortable for the draftees. None of us has much money. We have small apartments and moderate salaries. But we all come from hospitable homes and we know how to welcome and entertain people.

We don't know any men in the nearby camps and consequently have no way of getting in touch with men who might be strangers in this locality. And these are the men we would like to invite. We figure the local boys have their own contacts here. We would like some type of recommendation of our guests; and we would welcome investigation of character, ourselves. Naturally, we would like to entertain nice people.

Our thought is to do our part here, hoping that women in far-off cities may be equally friendly to some of the lads who are dear to us. Do you think our idea is worth a try? If so, will you tell us how to proceed? Sincerely,
GOOD NEIGHBORS.

Defense Council Workers Welcome the Idea

DEAR G. N.: I have talked with three representatives of the District of Columbia Defense Council about your wish to proffer hospitality to out-of-town draftees stationed at military establishments in the vicinity of Washington, and each was enthusiastic about the idea. While each had a different slant on "how to proceed," their suggestions more or less dovetailed.

Archie C. Edwards, telephone Republic 5711, chairman of the Government Employes' Service Committee of the District of Columbia Defense Council, suggested that you enroll in the Women's Battalion,—a volunteer organization which has superseded the "draftettes," doing Red Cross work, etc., in addition to participating in Army camp dances. Mrs. Harry Bernton is chairman of the Volunteer Committee of the District Defense Council, with headquarters at Room 500, District Building, telephone National 6000, Branch 182, —and you would register here as a battalion member.

It was Mr. Edwards' idea that, under battalion auspices, you might visit one or several of the more than 28 military establishments near Washington—as guests at the regular dances—and, while there, talk with the hostess, the chaplain, the morale officer and others about your wish to invite small groups of draftees to your respective homes for Sunday supper, etc. Introductions could be made, acquaintanceship promoted in a conventional manner and you could issue invitations to congenial and interested individuals, with some guarantee, in advance, that your parties would be pleasant events for all concerned.

Mrs. Robert H. Bailey, secretary to J. Oliver Riehl, director of the local Defense Council, remarked that you, as a group of good neighbors, "are pioneering in a project which we approve and expect to promote on a community-wide scale." She said you might have "registered this offer of hospitality as your contribution," during the three days' round-up (June 10, 11 and 12), of volunteers in the District Defense Council's mobilization for civil protection.

However, it is not too late to put yourself on record as willing to "do your part," in this fashion, here. Although the 46 registration booths closed up shop at the end of the three days' formal enrollment period, work of registering volunteers will continue at the National Guard Armory Building, Pennsylvania Avenue and Sixth Street Northwest, under the direction of Mrs. Bernton's committee.

"We have been hoping and trying," said Mrs. Bailey, "to reach people who will want to volunteer hospitality, for an evening or a week-end, to draftees on leave; who may want them as guests for dinner, or maybe overnight, or for the whole week-end; who would take them to church, have them for Sunday dinner, and generally share with them the pleasures of wholesome family life." Mrs. Bailey, by the way, can be reached at Defense Council headquarters, as listed above.

Minor Hudson, chairman, Recreation and Community Hospitality committee of the D. C. Defense Council, spoke along much the same lines as Mrs. Bailey. He, too, thought you might have registered this week as "dispensers of real hospitality." He told what several churches in Washington are doing for the boys in uniform—keeping open house in the church parlors Saturday and Sunday evenings, with the church young people's groups playing hosts to the draftees and footing the bill for refreshments. "It's primarily a 'get-acquainted' program," he said; "the idea being that the boys from camp will come to the parties, meet nice people and make real friends in the community, and thereafter be 'dated up' for the weekend by people who want them because they like them, not because they think they're doing them a favor."

Mr. Hudson remarked that a boy on leave usually is torn between two desires. "On the one hand, he has a yen for homelike social life; and on the other hand, a desire to go out and raise hell. But most boys will decide in favor of wholesome contacts, good clean fun, nice girls,—if they know where to find that sort of thing. A program to provide it is very much needed in Washington right now,—and we are eager to get such help as this letter offers."

Mr. Hudson has offices at 1343 H Street Northwest, telephone MEtropolitan 2697. After June 25 (he is currently out of town) he will be at your disposal to discuss the proposition, in the event you want his advices.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Shiny Skin Doesn't Hurt in Pictures, Says Wendy Barrie

For girls planning to have their pictures taken this summer, here are some hints from Wendy Barrie, movie star:

"Don't use too dark a make-up, or a very dark lipstick. Most girls look best with a light, natural foundation, a medium or natural lipstick. Don't mind a little shine to your skin. That's the modern, natural way. Most Hollywood photographers today insist on it—say it gives that all-important casual look to a shot.

"Above all, don't have your hair set tight the same day you are to have pictures made. Have it done a couple of days ahead so it will look natural. Never change the style of your coiffure just before going to the photographer. No one will recognize you—and it's your family and friends who want the pictures.

"Last, but not least," says Wendy, "wear a frock that you like and feel well in, one with a neckline that won't go out of style next month. Avoid heavy, stylized jewelry or hats. Keep it simple.

"It's your face that should be in the picture. Never let yourself be upstaged by a coiffure, a collar, too much lipstick or an earring."

Woman of 87 Proves Value Of Exercise; Is Erect, Supple

By Ida Jean Kain

WHETHER or not you are too old to exercise depends largely on whether you have given in to laziness all your life. That not too complimentary conclusion about some of you suggested itself when an 87-year-old Cleveland resident who takes her daily dozen as a matter of course observed off-handedly that she was brought up to work hard.

She told me that she began exercise in her 20's. I wish you could see her. She is remarkably firm and supple. She wouldn't, for anything, miss her daily calisthenics. She does upward stretching, forward bending to touch her toes—which is a good test of suppleness—sideward bending, arm circling and deep-knee bends.

Her posture is something to marvel at, too. She is youthfully erect, not just straight. And do you think she slumped down into a soft, comfortable chair for this chat? Oh, no. She sat upright on a piano stool and occasionally gave herself a little whirl from sheer exuberance.

Never Too Old to Exercise

So don't get the idea that you might be too old to exercise. It isn't your age—it's how much exercise you are accustomed to doing. You can't suddenly take up exercise and romp through a strenuous set without feeling unpleasant after effects. You should begin slowly, increase the stint very slowly, and keep it up.

If you would simply put your joints through their full range of motion every day, it would not only keep you from getting stiff, but it would give you a sense of well being through the stimulation to the nerve endings in the joints.

Here is a set which moves all the joints: Circle alternate arms from the shoulders up, around and down. Stretch upward. Bend forward and sideward at the waist. Swing your legs loosely from the hips. Go into a deep-knee bend to loosen up the knee joints. And flex your fingers to keep your knuckles limber. Just those few simple movements will help to keep you supple and younger than your years

Gumption Needed.

Apparently there is no age limit on exercise. What it takes is a little gumption!

This lively lady also proves a point about diet. She has always preferred simple foods—dark bread and cheese, milk, fruits and vegetables—and she never discards the "pot liquor," but always uses it as a beverage. And there's another explanation of her high vitality—good habits of eating all her life.

Polish Gen. Wieniawa And Wife Visit Capital

By Elizabeth Henney

"In the military, one can commit any stupidity, so long as one does not deceive. In diplomacy one may deceive, but one must not be stupid. I am a military man." So said Polish Gen. Bolislaw Wieniawa-Dlugoszowski to his leader, Marshal Pilsudski, some years ago as he requested Pilsudski not to appoint him either foreign minister of his own country nor to an ambassadorship abroad. Later he served in a high position in his own country, as Ambassador to Rome, and yesterday, on a visit to Washington, was jubilant over the newly formed Polish regiments in Canada, whose purpose is "that Poland shall rise again."

It was at a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel, and the General was being eagerly questioned about the new Polish brigades, for although he is not in any way connected with them, he is, as are all of his countrymen, intensely interested in their progress.

Gen. Wieniawa's aid to his homeland lies in a different field now, for as managing editor of the Polish Daily News in Detroit, he keeps his countrymen informed, in their native tongue, of the ever-changing international situation.

For the past two or three days he and Mme. Wieniawa have been the house guests of Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer, who is the widow of another Polish general. They made the trip to the East coast to have a visit with their 19-year-old daughter, Suzanne. Suzanne, by the way, was graduated from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London, toured with Shakespearean companies and is now connected with the British Ambulance Corps in New York.

Has Written Plays, Books and Poetry

One might well wonder at the idea of military and diplomatic training as a background for editorship, but Gen. Wieniawa-Dlugoszowski has a fine literary background as well. For many years his plays have been among the most popular of those produced in the Polish theater, he has written books, poetry, and in 1936 was appointed Poet Laureate of Poland.

As for his military career, for 24 years he has been in the Polish cavalry. During the first World War and for several years thereafter he was Marshal Pilsudski's aide, and was for years commander of the Second Division of Polish Cavalry, with headquarters in Warsaw, where his home, the Lazienki Palace in Lazienki Park, was one of the show places of the city. Incidentally, he is titled, but of such a democratic turn of mind that he always has refused to use it.

Another incidental item of interest to Washingtonians is the fact that the general and his wife were best man and matron of honor for the former Polish Ambassador and Countess Potocka, when the Potockis were married in Paris some years ago.

Of moderate height and stocky build, with white hair sweeping back from a high forehead and steely eyes that glint from a hawk-nosed face, he looks the part of the courageous general who refused to leave his train when it was being bombed in Bordeaux. "Because," said he mildly, "as I explained to my wife at the time, if a bomb is going to hit you it might as well be while you are being comfortable in a train, rather than uncomfortable in a stuffy air-raid shelter."

Stayed in Train Until Bombing Ended

So they stayed "comfortably" in the train until the bombing was over. That was when they were en route to America, some ten months ago, from Italy, where the general was suddenly not Ambassador any more.

Looking across the table yesterday at Mme. Weniawa one noted a small, trim figure (modishly encased in a beige suit with hat to match) and small, chiseled features. Her manner was quiet, but in the dark-brown eyes was a gleam that made one feel that she, too, could make herself comfortable in a train while it was being bombed. Note for the fashion-conscious: Her only ornament was in the lapel of her suit coat—two rectangular ivory links, which were Persian miniature paintings.

The Wieniawas left Washington yesterday afternoon to return to Detroit by way of New York, but expect to visit the Capital again in the near future.

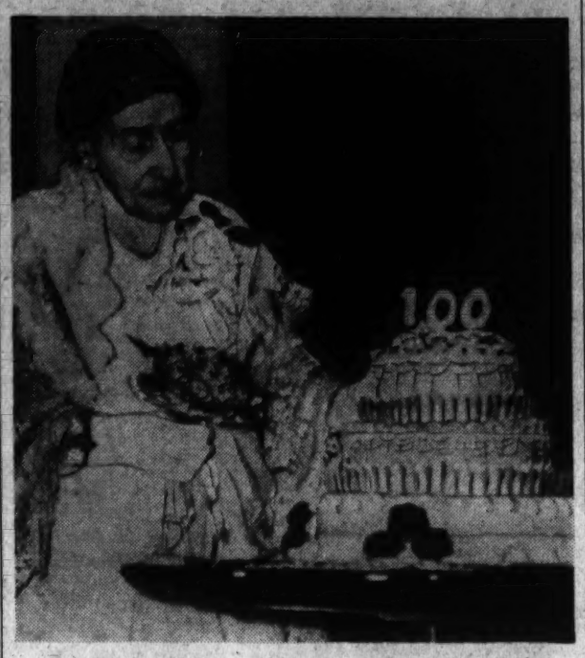
Mrs. Hatcher Reaches 100



Underwood & Underwood

MRS. ROBERT A. HATCHER

All of the jinxes attached to Friday, the 13th, were automatically annulled yesterday when Mrs. Robert A. Hatcher welcomed hundreds of guests at the Methodist Home in celebration of her 100th birthday anniversary.

Born in Clyde, N. Y., June 13, 1841, Mrs. Hatcher has led a useful and happy life despite wars and rumors of wars which have come and gone during the century, and if she believed in such things, she probably would say the "13" in her birthdate had brought her luck. Certainly, few persons attain 100 years with the good health, good spirits and hosts of friends that are hers.

Yesterday she received her guests in the drawing room of the Home, assisted by Mrs. Rachel Fay, who is one of her closest friends. She wore a white lawn dress, which was her mother's wedding gown and which her mother had embroidered. It was ankle length, made in redingote style. The overskirt, trimmed down the front and around the bottom with a 2-inch ruffle, was formed of puffs and strips of the material and the embroidered panels, set together with lace insertion. There were narrow ruffles in the armhole.

Mrs. Hatcher wore a white lace shawl over her shoulders and arms, a high lace collar and short white embroidered gloves. She had a corsage of gardenias on her left shoulder and held an old-fashioned bouquet of pink roses and blue sweet peas.

The rooms were fragrant with the baskets and vases of flowers and the table in the drawing room was laden with gifts and cards of greeting. In the dining room, pink roses formed the center bouquet for the table and a pink-and-white birthday cake bore the inscription, "100."

Among the letters of congratulation was one from the retiring Chief Justice of the United States, whom Mrs. Hatcher recalls seeing as a baby in his carriage in Glens Falls, N. Y.

"Mrs. Hughes and I send you our heartiest congratulations on your one-hundreth birthday, and we greatly regret that we cannot be present at the appropriate celebration of this anniversary," was Chief Justice Hughes' birthday message.

Among many other greetings were those from Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Bishop Adna W. Leonard and the Rev. Dr. William Andrew Keese, pastor of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, of which Mrs. Hatcher is an active member. It was in this church that she was married, in 1867, by the Rev. John Newman, who later was ordained a bishop.

Among those who attended the reception yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Carter, cousins, from Glens Falls, N. Y. Mrs. Hatcher went to Glens Falls with her parents at the age of four years, when her father became principal of the Glens Falls Academy. She spent her girlhood there and returned there from Charleston, Mo., following the death of her husband, who was a member of Congress from Missouri when they were married.

Among others present were Mrs. Harry Hoskinson, president of the board of managers of the home, which arranged the reception, under Mrs. Hatcher's direction; Mrs. Hattie Hall, treasurer of the board; Dr. and Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, and Robert Frederick Freund, who was director of the Metropolitan Church Choir for some time and has since entertained with the Gypsy Chorus at the home.

House Backs Big Relief Budget Slash

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday approved the first major reduction of non-defense expenditures in the 1942 budget, sending to the Senate an $885,905,000 relief appropriation for the 12 months beginning July 1.

The figure is $95,800 under the amount recommended by President Roosevelt last month, $109,000,000 below the sum submitted in the budget message in January and $464,000,000 below the relief appropriation for the current fiscal year, will provide employment for about 1,000,000 WPA workers, compared with an average of 1,700,000 this year.

New Dealers won a narrow victory yesterday when the House adopted by a roll-call vote of 169 to 165 an amendment knocking out of the relief law the present requirement that workers must be laid off for at least 30 days after 18 months of continuous employment by the WPA. The amendment was offered by Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Food Stamp Fund Loses

Another amendment, supported chiefly by members from urban and industrial areas, both Republican and Democratic, eliminated from the bill a provision which would have earmarked $50,000,000 out of the total sum available for relief for disposal of surplus commodities under the food stamp plan.

The amendment, sponsored by Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, majority whip, was carried by a teller vote of 168 to 122.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, demanded a roll-call on his amendment, approved Thursday by rising vote, barring the WPA from giving employment to David Lasser, former president of the Workers Alliance, now drawing a $4,400 salary as a special investigator of reemployment of WPA workers in private industry.

The amendment was carried by 214 to 112 on the record vote.

Alien Ban Retained

An amendment eliminating from the present relief law the ban on employment of aliens by the WPA, proposed by Representative Maciora (Democrat), of Connecticut, was overwhelmed by a vote of 71 to 15.

Also snowed under was a motion by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, to recommit the bill to the committee with instructions that it write legislation abolishing the WPA and providing for Federal grants-in-aid for relief programs to be administered by the States and localities. The Taber motion was defeated on a voice vote.

Passage of the relief bill itself also came on a voice vote, with only a scattering of "noes."

Wallace Tells Farmers Greed Is Two-Edged

By the Associated Press

Vice President Wallace advised agricultural groups yesterday to "take caution" in pressing demands for higher farm prices lest they incur public resentment, lose crop control programs and suffer a "terrible debacle" when peace comes.

Addressing a national AAA conference, the former Secretary of Agriculture said that those who showed a "greedy, grabbing and political spirit" during the present emergency "can expect to reap the whirlwind later on."

Wallace pleaded for national sacrifices by all groups, saying that "only the might of the United States stands between Hitler and world domination."

"The speed with which we are able to demonstrate our might," he said, "may determine whether the democracies are able to win and whether we are to be drawn into the conflict."

Wallace told the farmer representatives attending the conference that when the war ends, they could expect a powerful demand for a sharp reduction in Government expenditures and possibly the elimination of appropriations for farm price-supporting and benefit payments programs.

Because of this prospect, he said, farmers "must not overplay their hands at this time."

"Enactment of legislation proposing 100 per cent parity loans for major crops would have been a serious mistake," he said. Wallace also questioned the wisdom of the 85 per cent loans Congress approved.

Because of these loans, huge appropriations may be necessary later on, Wallace said, to make up losses the Government may incur in making such loans. While conceding that justice entitled farmers to full parity, he asserted the country would not support such prices unless and until there was full employment in the cities.

Wallace, himself a corn-hog farmer, declared he doubted whether the country would support hog prices of $9 per 100 pounds. The Agricultural Department recently announced that it would support prices at this level at Chicago in a move to encourage greater production.

A WIDE VARIETY OF CLOGS WERE MADE BY THE "TECH" GIRLS—WHICH DO YOU LIKE?

They Shoe Themselves at 'Tech'

Clog shoes have caught the fancy of girls at McKinley "Tech" High School. And, to solve the price problem and keep their budgets balanced, the students make their own shoes in the home economics class.

The project was started by Miss Lucy Knox, home economics instructor. Miss Knox, leader of the Tech Troop of Girl Scouts, said the wooden clogs will also solve the problem of what to wear around the camp this summer. Word of what the girls were trying to do spread through the school and Robert Williams, woodshop instructor, and the boys in his class volunteered to make the soles. Patterns, leather tops and embellishments are designed by the girls.

Dummy Guns on the Production Line at Fort Meade

After a couple of weeks for tooling up, the District's 104th Ordnance Company has gone into production on 126 dummy antitank guns for the Twenty-ninth Division at Fort George G. Meade. Until the first order of 48 guns is completed, work will be pushed in two shifts daily.

"We lost a little time tooling up," said Capt. Melvin H. Harris, commanding the 104th Ordnance Company, yesterday, "but we have arranged our production line so almost everything can be done by welding. Our raw material bottlenecks have been cleared and we should turn out four guns a day when we start rolling."

The guns, which will cost about $4 each, follow the genuine 37-millimeter antitank gun so closely that no difference is discernible at 100 yards. The wheels and chassis of the Ordnance Company model are derived from discarded truck rear ends; the barrel and recoil tube are tapering drive shafts from worn-out automobiles; the traverse mechanism is an automobile steering gear; the elevating mechanism is a cheap screw-jack; the shiled and apron are cut from the sides of abandoned World War tanks.

All machine work is done in the shop trucks in which the Ordnance Company repairs the division's arms.

Calendar Halts Policemen

Alexandria's police force, already undermanned and handicapped by injuries, isn't taking any chances with the 10 new policemen who recently were appointed by City Manager Carl Budwesky.

The "rookies" were scheduled to be sworn in yesterday, but the ceremony was postponed a day when an official of the department glanced at a calendar.

And Still, No License

Magistrate Nicholas H. Pinto today fined him a total of $208. Unable to pay, he was ordered to serve 62 days

Lack of D.C. School Funds Is Deplored

'Doing Best We Can,' Dr. Ballou Advises Public Meeting of Board of Education

More than a score of community spokesmen last night urged school improvements, including new construction, replacement and repair, and additional personnel for institutions in virtually every part of the city at the annual public meeting of the Board of Education on the forthcoming budget.

And after all had been heard, School Supt. Frank W. Ballou said "we are trying to do the best we can," but warned that the school system is plagued by lack of funds. The meeting was at Thomson School.

Referring to an oft-repeated demand for the hiring of clerks to aid principals of elementary schools, the school head declared that requests for funds for this purpose had been sought since 1933, but to no avail.

"Be Realistic," He Urges

To demands for repairs of various natures, Ballou urged the citizens to "be realistic." An appropriation of $750,000 for schools repair had been asked for in the last year, but this was slashed by Congress to $500,000—a sum insufficient, Ballou stated, for all the repairs desired.

Answering numerous requests for resurfacing of playgrounds, the superintendent explained that dirt playgrounds continually are in need of resurfacing while harder surfaces such as concrete were less desirable for play purposes.

"Everything that has been asked for here," Ballou concluded, "has been asked for before. We can't do all this without money. We are trying to make some progress in all directions."

Among complaints about school conditions was one expressed in a letter signed "Rachael Young La Follette (Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, jr.)," of 2 East-West Highway, Chevy Chase, Md., wife of the Wisconsin Senator.

Called Health Menace

The letter charged that the playground of E. V. Brown School, where her son was a kindergarten student, was in a "disgraceful condition and a health menace."

"There is grave danger of infection in all that filth and grime," she wrote. "I have been so disgusted I have considered taking him (the son) out altogether."

Commenting on the charges of the dirty playground Ballou pointed out the E. V. Brown School was in the process of being abandoned.

Among the requests of citizens were the following: a new school in the area now serviced by Grant and Weightman schools, which were termed "very old and unsuited to modern conditions"; an additional school in the area of Alice Deal and Gordon Junior High Schools because of overcrowding, and an assembly hall and additional rooms at Randle Highlands School because of an increase in attendance of from 486 to 752 in six years.

Completion of Schools Urged

Completion of Calvin Coolidge High School and Paul Junior High School was requested.

Resurfacing, regrading or fencing of playgrounds was sought at the following schools: Janney, John Burroughs, Benjamin Stoddert, Powell, Ketcham, Van Buren, Oyster, and E. V. Brown.

Other improvements asked for included $750,000 for blanket school repairs; a new roof and completion of a wing at Lafayette School; a fence at Horace Mann School running along Forty-fifth Street; two additional teachers and an augmented supply of books at Powell Junior High School; an appropriation of $50,000 for 32 teachers to instruct District shut-ins five days a week. Present appropriations for the teaching of 1,400 handicapped children here also are insufficient, it was said.

Woman Pursues Foe On Street With Fork

Pedestrians in the 1400 block of Eleventh Street Northwest were startled last night to see a colored woman sprinting down the sidewalk, closely followed by another who brandished a 2-foot-long carving fork. Police were called.

Second Precinct Patrolmen J. J. Cullinane and J. B. Monroe raced to the scene by scout car. Forgetting her original quarry the pursuer turned on the officers and made several lunges at them, the patrolman reported.

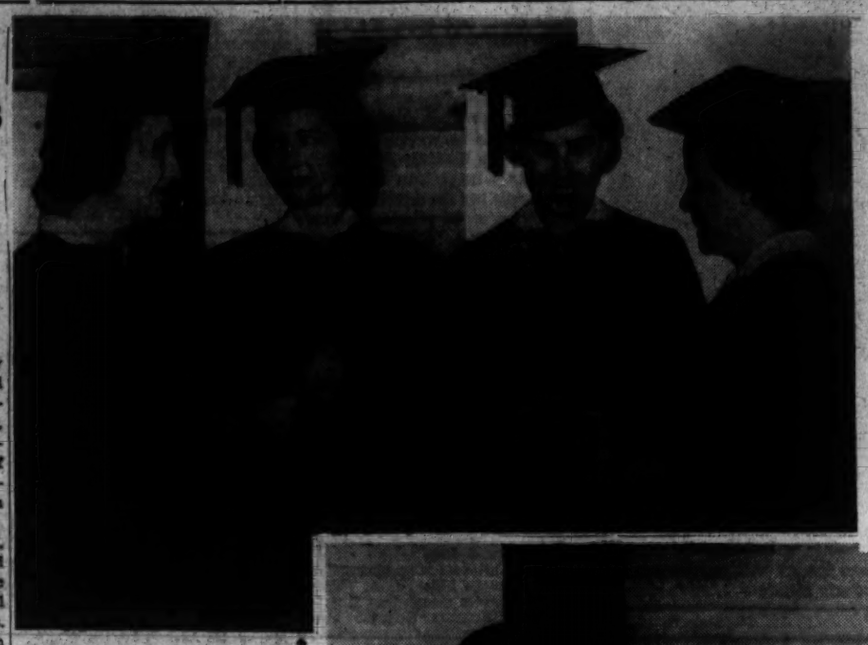
She was taken to the station house where she was booked as Chica Bella Wallace, 46, of 1412 Eleventh Street Northwest, charged with being drunk and disorderly, and locked up. She refused to divulge the cause of the argument and police never contacted the other party to the quarrel who had not ceased fleeing, even with arrival of police.

Stolen Watch Beats Owner to the Police

Harvey H. Brake's watch yesterday beat him to the Fourth Precinct Station, where he went to report its theft.

It had been found on an 18-year-old colored youth brought in on another complaint, and police listed it among his personal effects.

Meanwhile, Detective Frank Dodson was trying to locate the missing watch of Representative Wirt Courtney, of Tennessee. The colored boy's watch didn't fit the description of the Congressman's. But later when Brake, a Pennsylvania Railroad yard man, told about his timepiece being stolen, Dodson remembered he had a watch to match the specifications.



Hill Addresses National U. Law Graduates

Senator Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, told National University graduates last night that "we must do all that may be necessary to get our help to England" and "if there is a risk involved, we must take it."

Addressing the law school's seventy-second annual commencement exercises at Memorial Continental Hall, Senator Hill added:

"We must do all that is necessary to protect and safeguard the vital interest of the United States wherever that interest may be, whether it be here at home, in South America, in some island in the sea or in some place once distant but which now, due to the conquest of distance by airplane, has become an outpost of the liberty and the civilization which we enjoy and which we would preserve.

"Fear has not guided our past and fear will not control our future."

The Alabaman said that "to do less than enough is just as bad as to do nothing at all."

The degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Senator Hill by Leslie C. Garnett, university chancellor. The Senator was cited for "distinguished and eminent services in the cause of good government and the promotion of the national welfare."

Also receiving doctorates were Gilberto Concepcion, doctor of juridical science; Marian DeBelle, doctor of juridical science; John Edward Dunphy, doctor of juridical science; Felix Eugene Sklagen, doctor of juridical science, and Robert William Mitchell, doctor of jurisprudence.

Graduation Daze . . .

Literary Group Wins Debate At Woodward

The Washington Literary Society last night won first honors in the Woodward School for Boys annual class day debate held at 1736 G Street Northwest. The debate was followed by the school's annual declamation contest and dance.

The debate winners upheld the negative of the subject, "Resolved, That the Powers of the Federal Government Should Be Increased." The team was composed of Robert J. Brown, Edward C. Burns and Alan B. Prosise, jr. The Jefferson Literary Society's team which lost, however, produced the best single debater of the evening in Thomas W. Smith, according to the judges' decision.

Prosise, of the winning debate team, won first honors in the declamation contest, in which William M. Noyes placed second and Charles M. Stevenson 2d, was third. Roger F. George was given honorable mention.

Awards are to be presented the winners at the school's commencement exercises to be held at 8 p. m. Monday at 1736 G Street Northwest.

D. C. Airport's Landing Lights Pass Test

They tried out the landing lights at the new National Airport for the first time last night, and the unanimous verdict was "thumbs up."

"Why, it's practically foolproof," remarked Capt. S. I. Griesmer, who piloted a 21-passenger Eastern airliner in four landings and takeoffs, with aeronautical experts and newspapermen aboard.

It did look easy. As the big ship first circled high above the field, only white lights ringing the airport were visible through the thin veil of clouds. These will remain on continually when the airdrome goes into operation next Monday.

Then, suddenly, a double string of yellow lights popped up from one end of the airport to the other, neatly slicing the field in two. These marked the north-south runway. To land, Capt. Griesmer needed only to head between the two lines of lights.

But first he must get a signal. A red neon cross at the north end signified the runway was in use. The cross went out, and a green neon arrow pointed into the runway. At the same time two powerful searchlights, also at the north end, threw their beams down the asphalt landing strip. That meant "come on in."

With the visual signals complemented by instructions radioed from the control tower, where the lights are also operated, Capt. Griesmer could hardly miss.

Among those aboard for the tests were Fred Schnepfe, chairman of the Interdepartmental Engineering Commission, which built the airport; John Grove, manager of the airport; J. A. McDearmod, Eastern Air Lines station manager, and Corey Pearson, Civil Aeronautics Administration engineer who designed the lighting system. J. D. Morrison was copilot and James Ryan, flight steward.

Snow Calls Public Parley On Gas Saving

Representatives of local civic, business, labor and automotive groups will meet Monday at the new Municipal Center Building to work out a "practical and feasible" program of gasoline and oil conservation, it was announced yesterday.

The meeting is scheduled for 10 a. m. and was called at the request of the program subcommittee of the recently formed District Petroleum Conservation Committee, headed by Maj. Beverly C. Snow.

The subcommittee chairman, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, suggested the round table discussion following a meeting of his group yesterday.

Wife Starts Jail Term With Husband

Lucelle Shipley, 23, and blonde, said that if her husband, James, 29, went to jail she wanted to go, too.

So she started a 60-day term yesterday, while her husband began a one-year term.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts sentenced the Shipleys after they pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing clothing from a rooming house where they lived here.

Shipley claimed his wife had nothing to do with the theft, but some of the stolen articles were found in her suitcase and she admitted complicity.

Mrs. Shipley, who had no criminal record, refused Justice Letts' offer to refer her case to the probation officer for a recommendation of leniency.

Washington Will Honor Flag's Birth

Old Glory Passes 164th Milestone; Use by Pickets Is Assailed by Speaker

The Nation's Capital will give America's flag a first-rate birthday party today.

The national emblem is 164 years old and got an anniversary preview yesterday with observances of Flag Day at three places in Washington, the most spectacular being a street party sponsored by the Stanley Church Depue Post No. 30, American Legion, in front of the Federal Loan Agency Building, on Vermont Avenue, between H and I Streets Northwest.

Speaking in the rain to a crowd of approximately 1,000 persons, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, said the time had come when Americans must takes sides. It is not fitting, he said to use the flag at the head of picket lines which are used against the authority of the Government and he observed that the people will not long tolerate it.

"There can be no compromise with United States citizenship," Hines told the crowd. Melvin D. Hildreth, member of the Legion post, and Emil Schram, chairman, R. E. F., spoke briefly. The invocation was given by the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, past chaplain, District Legion Department.

Gen. Fries Addresses Scouts

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, United States Army, retired, addressing more than 150 Girl Scouts yesterday at ceremonies at 4:30 p. m., in the Anderson House, 2118 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, declared: "When we salute the flag and thereby pay respect to it, we respect everything that is fine and noble in the America of the past, in the America of the present and in our hopes of America for the future."

Florence L. Montague, 11, representing the Girl Scouts, thanked the general after the various troops had massed their colors and repeated the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag and the Girl Scout oath.

The District Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, presented a flag to Calvin Coolidge High School in a program held at the school at 2 p. m. The emblem was received by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president, Board of Education.

Flag Day exercises for the entire personnel of the Justice Department will be held at 11 a. m. today in the great hall of the department. The American Legion post in the department is the sponsor. Brig. Gen. Hines will speak. The United States Army Band will present a Flag Day concert in the Army Band auditorium at 10:30 a. m. today.

Elks' Celebration Tomorrow

Washington Elks will sponsor a flag celebration, with more than 100 patriotic groups participating, at 6 p. m. tomorrow in the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds. Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, will speak. A parade, to start at Ninth and H Streets Northwest, at 4:45 p. m., will signalize the program. In case of rain, the program will be held in the Agriculture Department Auditorium, Fourteenth Street and Independence Avenue.

The United States Flag Association, sponsors of Flag Week nationally, yesterday urged all to "display big flags and wear little flags."

The observance, nationally, is more elaborate and extensive than ever before, the association announced. Ceremonies will be held today in 700 cities. A vast parade will be held today in Philadelphia, where the flag was adopted by the Continental Congress on June 14, 1777. Justice Owen J. Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, will give a broadcasted address from Independence Square from 6:05 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Radio to Carry D. C. Children's Words to Dads

Ten children, living in or near Washington, will greet their fathers attached as naval officers to the American Embassy in London in a trans-ocean short wave broadcast on Father's Day.

The broadcast will be carried by Columbia Broadcasting System at 1:35 p. m., E. S. T. tomorrow.

Patricia Baker, 2911 Olive Drive Northwest, whose father is Commander C. A. Baker; Charles Townsend, 1650 Harvard Street Northwest, son of Commander R. J. Townsend; Paul Lee, 4223 Thirty-seventh Street Northwest, whose father is Commander Paul F. Lee; Anne Baird Sylvester, 4609 Landrum Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., daughter of Commander E. W. LOIS ENLOW

last night solved the mystery of a housebreaking in February at 2147 O Street Northwest in which $800 worth of her clothing and personal belongings were stolen. Miss Enlow, riding in a taxicab, spotted her silver fox cape on a woman walking up Fourteenth Street Northwest. The woman told Miss Enlow and police that the cape had been sold to her mother by a door-to-door salesman. The "salesman" couldn't be questioned last night because he's serving a sentence in Lorton. Miss Enlow recovered several other pieces of property from other women who had made purchases from the same man

Stand-up Bill For Saloons Draws Fire

Church Group Head, Rep. Copeland Join in Assault On Schulte Measure

Washingtonians who like to stand up and put their foot on a rail and their elbows on a bar suffered a mild jolt yesterday on Capitol Hill.

During testimony at the House subcommittee on two bills by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, calling for changes in regulations covering local liquor laws, disapproval was registered of the so-called stand-up proposal. Representative Copeland (Republican), of Nebraska, who remained silent throughout most of the hearing, interrupted at one point to object:

"Why," he said, "in this town you'd pack them in so tight that they couldn't fall when they got drunk!"

Wilbur LaRoe, representing the Washington Federation of Churches, also condemned the stand-up proposal, claiming such a rule would bring back the old-time saloon. He also advocated closing liquor stores at 6 p. m., adding:

"You can't buy flour or sugar after then; so, why should we be able to buy liquor?"

Schulte Bill Upheld

However, the Schulte bill, which would permit "stand-up" drinking at bars, found a quasi-champion in Ernest F. Henry, representing the Petworth Citizens Association. Henry said he favored some method permitting drinkers to be near the bartender and suggested that they be allowed to sit, if not stand, at the bar.

Representative Copeland later said he did not think the proposed rule prohibiting sale of liquor within 600 feet of schools, churches, Army posts, libraries and other institutions "is half far enough." He also deplored liquor conditions here and cited figures showing that Washington has a total of 1,949 liquor licenses of all types. He said:

"That means one license for about every 325 persons in the city. There are far too many liquor establishments here."

Representative Schulte, who is chairman of the subcommittee, took occasion to strike out at the big liquor concerns. He said:

"The small dealers in this town don't have a Chinaman's chance of staying in business in the face of widespread cut-rate price advertising. The powerful, well-fixed dealers have a competitive advantage."

Small Dealers Menaced

The committee was told that small dealers, in an attempt to keep up with price cutting by the bigger concerns, are buying far beyond their means and most of them are unable to get credit with wholesalers.

Schulte said he introduced his bills to prevent a return of prohibition to Washington and added:

"Conditions are such here that something must be done—and something drastic—if we want to keep a semblance of order!"

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, took the stand to charge that local dealers, particularly wholesalers, have attempted to tell the District Commissioners how to regulate the city's liquor industry.

Schulte promised early consideration of testimony by the subcommittee and interested persons an opportunity to file briefs until next Wednesday.

Albright Memorial Church Praised At Anniversary

Educational and religious leaders of Manor Park and elsewhere last night lauded Albright Memorial Church's contribution to the community at the congregation's fifteenth anniversary dinner.

Miss Elsie Green, principal of Whittier Public School, which grew up side-by-side with Albright Church, said that the congregation's charitable and other services went far beyond denominational lines. Paul Junior High Principal Thomas F. Ferry spoke in the same vein.

The Rev. William Basom, pastor of Beverly Hills (Va.) Community Church, and former Albright assistant, said that the church of 15 years hence would measure its value in greater service to the community.

Capt. Ira Keck Slated to Head Detective Bureau

Capt. Ira E. Keck, assistant chief of detectives, will be the new head of the Metropolitan Police Detective Bureau as soon as the Commissioners accept the retirement of the present chief, Inspector B. W. Thompson, it was learned at the District Building yesterday.

Inspector Thompson, it was reported, has already informed Police Supt. Ernest W. Brown of his plans to retire. The detective head, who recently has been suffering from a leg ailment, is now on leave.

'Flame of New Orleans' Flickers at RKO-Keith's

A Subdued Dietrich Makes Two Naughty Girls Quietly Interesting, With Able Support; Auxiliary Screen Subjects Are Noteworthy

"THE FLAME OF NEW ORLEANS." Universal picturization of a screen play by Norman Krasna, starring Marlene Dietrich, with Bruce Cabot, Roland Young, Mischa Auer, Andy Devine, Frank Jenks, Eddie Quillan, Laura Hope Crews, Franklin Pangborn, Theresa Harris, Clarence Muse and Melville Cooper. Directed by Rene Clair. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

"THE FLAME OF NEW ORLEANS," compared with "Seven Sinners," for example, merely flickers.

Thanks to the dual fact that Marlene Dietrich whiles away her wiles persistently throughout the action and that Rene Clair, in his first Hollywood production, has given the picture honest and straightforward direction, the new film at RKO-Keith's, despite its lack of excitement, is interesting and at times provocative entertainment. It has been photographed against lush backgrounds of the New Orleans of a century ago and adheres rigidly to the dress and modes of life in its period.

BELL.

The story, one would say conservatively, is 99 per cent the smouldering Miss Dietrich and 1 per cent everything else. She is cast again as a wicked lady from the capitals of Europe, known in the back rooms as Claire, but masquerading in the Crescent City as "The Countess." She lacks something like 75 cents of having a nickel, but is the proprietress of a wardrobe and series of hair-do's that are as seductive as the lift of her eyebrow, the half-smile on her lips or the occasional revelation of her wide-mesh, fishnet stockings. The ladies of the town don't think much of her. Any man in the place would give an eye to meet her.

The scramble for the Countess' favor finally narrows down to the richest banker in the city and the poorest young ship owner on the waterfront. To cope with this wide divergence of the social poles, the Countess finds it necessary to invent a disreputable "cousin," whom she impersonates when things get too hot among the aristocrats and too cool among the sailors. Miss Dietrich, by almost imperceptible methods, differentiates these "twin" blondes unmistakably. She is within altar reach of the Giraud affluence when the sailor puts in an appearance at the church and gives the play a "Philadelphia Story" ending. Director Rene Clair's cleverest touch is in his introduction of the tale—scarcely more than a suggestion of the familiar flashback fashion of dramatic recital, but enough to pique the curiosity.

Cast Is One of Note

Except that the flame has been turned pretty low, if one remembers "Destry Rides Again" and "Seven Sinners," Dietrich is handsomely cast in her present vehicle. She is just as tough as ever at heart, veiling her deviltry with a tongue-in-cheek portrayal of two very naughty girls, one of whom could act like a lady when the money moved her. As her two ardent suitors, Roland Young, as the banker, and Bruce Cabot, the ship owner, are sufficiently contrasted to be both dramatically and humorously effective. Mr. Cabot could be a mite rougher than he is, but Director Clair quite obviously toned his performance down to the key of the star's. Laura Hope Crews, Melville Cooper and Anne Revere, on the side of the socially elite, and Andy Devine, Frank Jenks and Eddie Quillan, three of Mr. Bruce's finest dockwallopers, contribute substantial supporting performances. Mischa Auer and Franklin Pangborn are visible only briefly, on the comedy side.

Supplementaries Are Notable

"The Flame of New Orleans" is augmented on the new bill by an unusually strong array of short subjects. The most vital and vivid of the lot is the "March of Time's" new issue, devoted to "Crisis in the Atlantic"—the most informative disclosure yet made of precisely what is going on in the Battle of the Atlantic as far north as Greenland. The boys on the ships are having no joyride. Then there is "Information Please," with Wendell Willkie as the guest expert, running neck-and-neck with Kieran, Adams and Levant. The color cartoon for the week is "Salt Water Daffy," having fun with the navy in a manner accurately described by the last word of the title. A richly diversified Pathe News completes a program that has a little something on it for every taste.

They Say This Will Be Their Last Time Around

Show Folks Get Rough at Met.

"THE WAGONS ROLL AT NIGHT." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Francis Wallace, adapted to the screen by Fred Niblo, sr., and Barry Trivers, costarring Humphrey Bogart and Sylvia Sidney, with Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie, Sig Rumann, Cliff Clark, Charley Foy, Frank Wilcox, John Ridgely, Clara Blandick, Aldrich Bowker, Garry Owen, Jack Mower and Frank Mayo. Directed by Ray Enright. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

It's just one scratch after another—but deep, in "The Wagons Roll at Night." Caesar, the carnival lion, succeeds in making this carnival show a carnival of clawing. He's even meaner than Humphrey Bogart, who has the meanest role of his long career of priceless meanie impersonations. Our score on Caesar shows three homicides and two clawings. As you may gather, when Caesar claws them, they usually stay clawed. And he's such a nice-looking old lion! Looks just like M-G-M's Leo, even if he does belong to Warner's.

Speed and action abound in this latest and sanguinary celluloid of troupers. By the same token the action is strikingly reminiscent of a merry-go-round and the dialogue has the general quality of a carnival barker's spiel. But if you yearn for a couple of relaxing hours of bloodshed and honky-tonk with a smidgeon of sentimentality tossed in—then "The Wagons Roll at Night" is your dish.

The love interest is quadrangular with a triangle blocked in. This geometric puzzle means that Carnival Owner Humphrey Bogart is also the boy friend of his fortune teller, Sylvia Sidney, who casts longing eyes at Lion Tamer Eddie Albert, who is in love with Joan Leslie. Caesar, the lion, plays the carnivorous Cupid by erasing Bad Boy Bogart from this mortal scene, but gets no credit for it.

Miss Sidney Returns

Many movie-goers will be interested in Sylvia Sidney's return to pictures. Her role of fortune teller is a bit lush for her type, but she steps into it smoothly. Also, she remains as pretty as in her days of stardom.

Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie lend themselves ingratiatingly to the youthful love interest element. In fact, they're like a breeze from the cornfields in the midst of the prevailing sawdust aroma. Humphrey Bogart is given such lowdown chores throughout that his final flash of heroism does little to redeem him in the minds of beholders. Even in his worst gangster parts Mr. Bogart has heretofore not been called upon to cooperate with pickpockets, steal his girl friend's jewelry and plan the slimiest attempted murder we've seen on the screen. He does it all in a repulsively masterful manner.

The great and complete treat on the Metropolitan screen is Robert Benchley's short of the forgotten man, the father of the June bride. It's perfect from the time he's edged out of his own living room by rug-cutting youngsters until he gives the bride away at the altar, where he's less noticed than the smallest posy in the bridal bouquet.

Fun Abounds In Earle's Slick, New Bill

"SHE KNEW ALL THE ANSWERS." Columbia picturization of a story by Jane Allen, costarring Joan Bennett and Franchot Tone, with Eve Arden, John Hubbard, William Tracy, Pierre Watkin, Almira Sessions, Thurston Hall and Grady Sutton. Directed by Richard Wallace. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Laughter and lots of it is on tap at the Earle this week. "She Knew All the Answers," a truly merry charade, is on the screen, radio's uproarious "Truth and Consequences" shares the stage with two smash acts and the result is a dream-world of sheer enjoyment.

So neatly do all these mad things tie together, which to tell you about first becomes something of a problem. Should you first hear of the little white lies that enmesh Joan Bennett, Eve Arden, Franchot Tone and John Hubbard on the screen? Would it be more interesting to describe how a Washington boy, yclept William "Calidore" McGuire, looked with his trouser legs rolled up, doing a hula in a very grassy skirt? Perhaps the Radio Aces, three gents of the finest Broadway genre, may interest you more. Or the always happy "Cavalcade" of the Roxyettes. Could be, could be.

Alas, these daft doings have melted the icy detachment of the professional observer into a quivering mass of—s-p-l-a-s-h!

It Happened in Wall Street

Actually, "She Knew All the Answers is a familiar outline, but so many neatly timed gags, lines and business clothe the frame that you'll vow, while you're watching, it's the smartest comedy of the summer. Perhaps because it's laid in mysterious Wall Street, where once we used to labor, and then makes fun of the blasted place makes it personally so appealing. A chorus girl has hooked a wealthy playboy, but she can't marry him until his conservative guardian approves, to get which she wangles a job in the office to gain the older's respect. She is as confused by "bulls" and "bears" as she is by the switchboard. She takes the glasses off conservative guardian, he becomes Franchot Tone and you go on from there.

Among the other very nice things about "She Knew All the Answers" is the fact that wry Eve Arden gets a role worth her bitter trouble and she makes it a delight. As a healthy roommate she has to play a disabled sister to impress Mr. T. John Hubbard—is good, too, fussing around in the girls' smoky kitchen and assuring his guardian his name is Petunia.

Farceurs Frolic Friskily

Both La Bennett and Tone are first-rate farceurs in the leads, indulging in last-reel arguments with their shadowy alter egos. The lovely Bennett is a pack of fun as the resourceful lady of the title and Tone makes some faces you don't expect leading men to make. William Tracy, as the office boy, and Almira Sessions, as a very established employe, will rate your laughs, too. For the general pace and sparkle of the piece, champagne cocktails to Director Richard Wallace and his writers.

"Truth and Consequences" is naturally even more fun on the stage than it seems over the air. We'll expose none of the details except to note how slick an m.c. is Ralph Edwards and how willing are his victims from the audience. Tonight's broadcast, by the way, will be from the Earle during the 6:35 supper show, going on the air at 7:30.

The Ralph Edwards novelty isn't all there is to the stage revue, as hinted above. The Radio Aces epitomize Broadway in their harmony style—vitality, brashness, wit and no lack of malice.

They're lads you could listen to longer. And the Roxyettes go through their complicated "Cavalcade" paces, the panoply of their trickiest routines, with that "Dizzy Blonde," Babs Robertson, dashing to the brink of destruction atop that shiny ball.

From all of which meandering, you're supposed to get the idea that the Earle has a slick, all-around merry bill. Get it? Grab it.

Gadget Identifies Blondest Blonde

Maris Wrixon is the blondest blonde on Warner Bros.' big lot.

Perc Westmore's blonde-o-meter said so. The blonde-o-meter, a gadget adapted from a standard electric photometer, gives readings of intensities of reflected light.

It was used on Miss Wrixon to determine the proper shade of makeup for her role in "Bullets for O'Hara."

Blondes reflect the most light, Miss Wrixon most of all. The most brunette girl on the lot, according to the blonde-o-meter, is another Maris—Mona Maris.

MUSIC DEPT.: Ben Bernie, who has been practicing with Mischa Elman, invited the famed violinist to attend his broadcast last week. The Bernie program features a quiz game—and the $300 question, last week, was to have been: "If Benny Goodman, Jascha Heifetz and Jose Iturbi got into a jam session, what instruments would you hear played?" . . . Bernie noticed that Elman and his wife and children were seated in the front row—and so, for that question, he substituted the name of "Mischa Elman" for "Jascha Heifetz" . . . The quiz-answerer responded: "I'd hear a Clarinet—from Benny Goodman" . . . "Right," said Bernie, "And from Elman?" . . . "That's easy," was the response. "Mischa Elman? Trombone."

But a few days later, the membership fell off again, when the newcomers became reluctant to adopt a deficit—which resulted when Maurois sent his bill for lecture fee, $200.

At last, plans for a new A. E. F.! . . . "Is that inside information?" he calmly asked the sergeant—who nodded, knowingly, and added: "We'd have been in Norway weeks ago, only" . . . "Only what?" gasped the eager newspaperman . . . "Only," continued the sergeant, grinning, "we're waiting for the WFA to build those 5,000 igloos there."

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

The 71-year-old gentleman who owns the Washington ball club is, of course, very unhappy at the goings-on which find the Nats in eighth place, but he's unbowed and still bristling with the idea that his team can play good ball. Clark Griffith's cigars are literally in shreds and his eyes flash when he talks about his ball team.

"Consarn it, I never thought we would lose as many ball games," he was saying yesterday. "This is a better ball club than those standings show. We don't belong in eighth, or seventh. We're gonna get squared away and win a lot of ball games."

Mr. Griffith puts the finger chiefly on his pitching. "That's what I don't understand," he said. "This was supposed to be a good pitching staff—Leonard and Hudson and Chase and Sundra. But they've been putting us out of ball games before we get in 'em. But, by sin, I'm not gonna trade 'em. They can pitch better ball.

"Those pitchers have been making too many mistakes. Hudson lost two games in one week because he made two bad pitches. Leonard can win if he will lay off that curve ball. He's no curve baller. Bucky Harris has told him that. If Leonard can't win with his knuckler and that screwball he throws, he can't win, that's all. But his knuckler is as good as it ever was."

It was gently suggested to Griffith that his pitchers weren't getting much in the way of hitting or infield support, and he agreed to that. "'Course they haven't been getting good support, and something's got to be done about that. This ball club is getting to be a deep mystery to me. George Case isn't hitting, Jimmy Bloodworth is in a slump and it's too much for the pitchers to carry.

"I thought this would be a good double-play club. Down South, Bloodworth and Pofahl were making all sorts of double plays for us, but they've quit to a walk. I though Bloodworth would have a big year, but he hasn't improved a lick. You've got to keep him around, though, because he can play every position."

The mystery of George Case's batting slump is not baffling Griffith, however. "The poor fellow is beside himself. He has been a .300 hitter for us for three years and now that he isn't getting his hits, he's panicky. I know his trouble—he's too chock-full of fight and spirit, and it's making him doing things without thinking. He's got to lay back on that box and make those pitches come to him instead of racing after the ball."

The old gentleman refuses to take any rap for the Rick Ferrell-Vernon Kennedy deal with the Browns; at least not much of a rap. "Sure, Kennedy has been no account, but the whole deal has been a blessing. It brought out Jake Early as a catcher. We never did know he was up to handling a regular job, before. He hasn't made many mistakes behind the plate, and he's given us some power. For the first time in years, we've got a catcher who can hit.

"One of these days Case is going to get squared away and start getting on base, and our pitchers won't be needing so many runs. If I didn't think those fellows could still pitch winning games, I'd be downhearted about this ball club. But they're pretty good pitchers and as soon as we patch up a couple of spots on this team, they'll win."

He'd buy infielders and an outfielder, he said, if they were to be had. "I'd borrow the money, if I had to, to get a likely-looking shortstop or second baseman, but my hands are tied. The few prospects we've looked at are right in line of the draft. I can't be throwing good money after bad. I can't pay a fancy price for a ball player who will be putting on an army uniform pretty soon."

He said he had had losing ball clubs before and that it's a hard pull to put together a winner. "But this team doesn't need a whole lot if our pitching gets straightened out. One good man at second base or shortstop would help our pitching, in fact. Maybe we'll have that fellow with us soon." He said that last, significantly.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Galveston, Tex., June 13.—Tenderfoot aboard: Matty Bell, coach of S. M. U. for at least the next seven years, seriously doubts that very many college football coaches will toss their systems out the window this year over the sensationally effective T-formation, used and perfected last year by the Chicago Bears and the Stanford Indians.

CONSIDINE

The man whose genius for teaching the aerial game has much to do with the vast change in American football over the past ten years thinks that if the T-formation is taken up by coaches to any extent they will be high school coaches.

"Many of them," the coach told us yesterday while we were playing golf with him in Dallas, "are the type of high school coach which thinks it's possible to install this or that system at will . . . without really knowing what it's all about or whether his boys or the location of his school are in tune.

I can see them now. They'll buy the books Halas and Shaughnessy wrote on T, and maybe take a couple of weeks lessons at one of the coaching schools, and go back to their schools and try to teach it. But I don't think a handful of college coaches will try it, despite the success Halas and Shaughnessy had with it last year.

Speaking of football, and I daresay it's the most unseasonable topic imaginable, a couple of Southwestern Conference coaches are squawking mightily because Frank Leahy, new coach at Notre Dame, has reportedly invaded this region in search of talent to crate and ship to Notre Dame.

The coaches down here say this is a rank case of poaching and are of a mind to attempt to confine Leahy to the Pennsylvania coal mine region, the country's richest player-breeding area, if Jim Crowley doesn't object.

Football fans down this way agree, by the way, that John Kimbrough is going to make a fine pro for Douglas Hertz's New York Yankees. They believe, however, that new York audiences had better learn to expect no long, fanciful runs from Kimbrough, or kicks, passes or good blocks. His Forte, and Texans say that not even bronco Nagurski was better, is hitting that line for six or eight yards. They think the pro lines will be just as easy for him to crack as the semi-pros.

The most popular athlete in this he-man section of the country is Jimmy Demaret, the light-hearted golfer who goes in for sports jackets with flowered yellow shirts. Demaret picked up in the recent U. S. Open, and that was the second straight year he had done that, but the Texans swear by him, not at him. He learned his golf on a windswept course here and proved his steadiness under fire, to the satisfaction of the golf fans down this way. One day in Corpus Christi when with a $500 Nassau riding on the line, he shot a 60 over a par 72 course, missing two easy putts which would have given him 58.

The number of great golfers from Texas always astounds us. Tough little Ben Hogan who learned his flips as a stick man in Texas dice joint is the most consistent player in the game. The State also produced Harry Cooper, Dick Metz, Ralph Guldahl, National Women's Champion Betty Jameson and Harry Todd, the top amateur in the Open.

Maybe it's the weather that makes these golfers. Matty Bell says Texas weather is mainly responsible for the basketball style of football played in the Southwestern Conference. The players invariably have a fast track, a dry ball and perfect visibility—all of which make for fine and effective passing.

There's tremendous interest in the Louis-Conn fight down here. A Houston paper yesterday carried nearly a full page of drawings through which Jim Braddock was explaining how Billy is going to win, a curious stand for James to take in view of the fact that he owns a piece of Louis. Of course, what the papers overlooked is that Jim is getting in a little honest shilling for the "gate" of the fight, in which he will share. But he made it sound, and look, very convincing.

You get a different slant on sports here. The things you don't believe are very hot, when you write them in New York, often get a good play in these out-of-town papers, and the things into which you breathe a lot of rapturous passion are tossed into the wastepaper baskets of these Texas sports editors. More space is devoted to big league baseball here than in many of the papers of cities which have big time teams. And Western racing gets little or no attention, less, for instance, than lady rasslers.

Baltimorean Shares Lead At Cascades

Six Washingtonians Make Championship Bracket; Several Just Miss Medal

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Hot Springs, Va., June 13.—Earle Skinker, a 19-year-old Joe-College, from Columbia Country Club, and Herbert A. Wagner, jr., 20-year-old Baltimorean, upset the dope to tie for medal honors with 2-over-par 73s in the qualifying round of the thirty-seventh annual Middle Atlantic Amateur golf championship here today over the Cascades course.

Skinker and Wagner both finished before an afternoon thunderstorm swept over the Alleghenys and threatened to wash out the tournament, ruining the chances of a half-dozen first-flight contestants and saving the medal tie for the youngsters.

Three others had a knock at the medal on the last hole but just missed. Bobby Brownell, Manor's Southern intercollegiate champion, needed par for a 73 at 17, lost a ball for a two-stroke penalty but dropped a 60-foot putt for a six. That left him with a two on the eighteenth for a 73 but his birdie attempt from 50 feet stayed just inches to the left of the cup.

Miss Short Putts

Trailing by a few matches and playing through a real downpour, defending Champion Spencer S. Overton and his Maryland State two-man championship partner, Erford Barnes, came to the eighteenth, a long iron shot hole, with medal possibilities. Barnes needed a three, but was trapped and then missed a 5-foot putt while Overton needed a birdie and rimmed the cup. Thus Brownell, Barnes and Overton had 74.

Six Washingtonians made the championship bracket. City Champion Ralph Bogart trailed Skinker and Brownell with a mediocre 78, while three others had 80. Charley Price, 15-year-old Georgetown prep school student, played the par 36 back nine in 38, with seven regulation holes, for an even 80, one of his best rounds in medal competition. Dan Hunt, of Army and Navy, hit the 80 mark as did Earl McAleer, Manor's southpaw stylist. The latter quit when the rains left the course in an unplayable condition, but he was allowed to go back to the seventh hole when the storm subsided and he made it.

Eddie Johnson Has a 75

Maryland Intercolligate Champion Eddie Johnson, of Baltimore, was third low scorer with a 75 while others with 78 or better included Bogart and the Janssen brothers. Charlottesville's teen-age Bannockburn Invitation finalists, Ben with a 77 and Pat 78.

Two Manor members just missed the first flight, Lee Ritter by straying three over par on the last three holes for an 83 and Carl Willingham, with an eight on the seventeenth for an 85. They were both rain-trapped. Highest score in the pay-off flight was an 81 by Baltimore's Jesse Dowling, jr., including a nine on the par four second hole.

The co-medalist won first-round matches in the senior championship, W. J. Peters, Manor, over E. H. Bobbitt, of the host club, 2 up, and Fay Ingalls, Hot Springs, over Association Secretary Dr. W. C. Barr, 2 up. A. E. Gardiner, Columbia, defeated B. H. Sipple, Indian Spring, 5 and 4, and B. S. Prentice, Hot Springs, won over Dr. Bruce L. Taylor, Indian Spring, 5 and 4, in the other initial round match.

Former Champion Harry G. Pitt, of Manor, and Charles Kent, Richmond city champion, were the principal casualties, Pitt calling it a day in the midst of the storm while Kent had an 83.

Skinker Hits Hot Streak

Skinker, who specializes in medal ties, hit a hot streak on the first nine which was responsible for his medal-tying score. One overplaying the 592-yard fifth, he dropped a putt the width of the green for a birdie, holed a 15-footer on the next

Mathematician Beats Looter For Upperville Show Title

Meander Farms' Gelding Wins 3-Year-Old Crown on Decision Which Surprises Fans

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Upperville, Va., June 13.—A decision which henceforth will be known to many as "the Great Hold-Up of Upperville," was handed down at the Upperville Colt and Horse Show today.

Without winning a single blue ribbon, Meander Farm's Mathematician took the 3-year-old title over Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's highly regarded Looter in the most surprising juvenile victory seen in the hunt country for a long time.

Moving unimpressively through his four classes, Meander's little bay gelding took a third and a fourth ribbon and qualified for the championship by placing second to Mrs. D. N. Lee's Glamor Man in the lightweight green hunters.

Looter Breezes Along

In the meantime Looter was having things almost entirely his own way, decisively winning two blues among horses of his own age and then taking the event for middle and heavyweight green hunters, in which older horses appeared.

Because of Looter's brilliant record at the Lynchburg, Stuyvesant and Millwood shows earlier this season, the rail-birds figured that he was a 1-to-10 shot to take the title, with Edward Barker's Spanish Oak considered the likeliest contender for reserve honors.

Mathematician, second to Looter in the race for 3-year-old honors at Lynchburg, was absolutely a dark horse when Rider Jack Payne brought him into the ring with Looter, Spanish Oak, Springsbury's Traumertan, Pine Brook Farm's O'Doc and Benton Stable's Merzig to be judged for the final award.

The announcement of the Meander Farm entry's championship brought about an immediate halt

Patty Berg Gains Finals At Cincinnati

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 13.—Miss Patty Berg, 23-year-old Minneapolis professional, and Mrs. Burt Weil, 37-year-old Cincinnati housewife and three-time Ohio champion, fought their way today to the finals of the twelfth annual Women's Western Open Golf Championship.

They stage their 36-hole scrap for the crown tomorrow over Cincinnati Country Club's hilly, rain-soaked course.

Miss Berg sank a 3-foot birdie putt to beat Miss Betty Jameson, two-time national amateur queen from San Antonio, on the third extra hole. Mrs. Weil administered a 3 and 2 setback to Mrs. James P. Platt, of Dayton, who yesterday ushered Miss Helen Dettweiler, Washington pro, out of the running, 7 and 6.

Wins on Technicality

A golfing technicality gave victory to Miss Berg instead of Miss Jameson, the San Antonio miss getting one of the worst breaks ever suffered by a star in a major tournament.

On the eleventh hole, with the match all even, Miss Jameson was on the green in two, 15 feet from the pin, while Miss Berg was trapped on her second shot, 25 feet from the stick. As Miss Berg blasted from the flooded trap, Miss Jameson's caddy attempted to wrest the pin from the cup, but it stuck.

The ball struck the stick on the fly, and the referee ruled that Miss Jameson's caddy was at fault, awarding the hole to Miss Berg and placing her one up, although Miss Jameson downed her long putt for a birdie three. Miss Jameson drew even with Miss Berg with a birdie on 17.

On the eighteenth Miss Jameson appeared to have the match sewed up as Miss Berg banged her second into a deep trap, while the Texas girl's ball was 18 feet from the cup. Miss Berg blasted out, however, and ran down a six-foot putt for a half, keeping the match alive.

They halved the first two extra holes in par figures, but Miss Berg ran down a half-stymied putt on the twenty-first to take the match and the finals position.

Connie Mack Steals Dodgers' Thunder; Buys Army Player

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 13.—While major league baseball clubs are losing players to the Army through the Selective Service Act, the Athletics reversed the process today. They announced they had bought a pitcher who is already in the Army.

The soldier-pitcher is Orge Cooper, 23, 6-foot 175-pound right-hander, who recently began his year of training in a Virginia Army camp. The A's bought him from the Lynchburg Club of the Virginia League for delivery upon his discharge from the Army.

Stars Flaunt Storm, Crack Par at Girard

By the Associated Press

Girard, Ohio, June 13.—Trampling through thunderstorms, a trio of the Nation's top golfers slashed three off the Mahoning Country Club par today to lead in the $5,000 Mahoning Valley Open.

Ben Hogan, swarthy slammer from Hershey, Pa.; Byron Nelson, quiet Toledo Inverness pro, and burly Lawson Little, of San Francisco, racked up 67's to pace the field of 168 in the 72-hole classic which ends Sunday.

Craig Wood, the National Open champion, was far back with 38-34—72.

The sizzling scores appeared only preliminary to what the boys will do to the 6,326-yard layout when and if the weather clears.

Clayton Heafner, big blond from Linville, S. C., was just one stroke off the pace with 36-32—68. Bracketed at 69 were Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass.; Bobby Cruickshank, veteran Richmond, Va., pro; Ted Luther, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., and Al Espinosa, Akron professional.

Vash Hromyak, of Sharon, Pa., was low among the amateurs with 70.

For the pros Johnny Bulla, of Chicago; Tony Joy, of Youngstown; Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh; Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, and Lloyd Mangrum, of Monterey Park, Calif., posted 70s.

Little picked up six birdies, four of them on the out nine, where he went 3 under par. One of the most violent storms of the day struck as Lawson was coming in on the "easy" nine and he took an even par to spoil his chance to take a clear-cut lead.

Hogan set a vicious pace throughout, with his long woods and accurate No. 7 iron, giving him five birdies. Four 1-underpar holes put Nelson with the leaders.

Whit Wyatt, Lanier Fight Mound Duel

Each Allow Four Hits; Two Singles And a Pass Give Redbirds Victory

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 13.—The Cardinals increased their National League lead over the Brooklyn Dodgers to three games tonight with a 1 to 0 victory on Southpaw Max Lanier's four-hit pitching before a crowd of 15,700.

Whitlow Wyatt, ace of the Dodgers staff, also limited the Red Birds to four hits but two of them, singles by Johnny Hopp and Don Padgett, followed a pass to Terry Moore in the third inning. Moore skipped over the plate for the lone tally.

The game turned the tables for both pitchers. The Dodgers beat Lanier in Brooklyn June 1, 3 to 2, while Wyatt shut off the Cardinals 6 to 0, two days later.

Except for the third inning St. Louis rarely threatened Wyatt. Hopp singled in the first inning with two out; Martin Marion doubled in the second inning, also after two were out, and both runners died on base.

Wyatt Saves Himself

In the sixth inning Wyatt walked two men but engineered a double play on Steve Mesner's smash to the mound to pull himself out of the hole.

Wyatt was Brooklyn's leading hitter with a double and a single. Billy Herman and Dolph Camilli came up with singles for the Dodgers' remaining hits.

The pitcher's double came in the third inning, but he was nailed in a double play on Peewee Reese's line drive to Mesner at third.

Brooklyn's best scoring chance came in the fourth inning when Lanier experienced a streak of wildness and walked three men. With the sacks loaded and two down, Mickey Owen's best effort was a grounder to Marion at shortstop.

Harvard Crew Choice Over Yale Today

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., June 13.—The Yales and the Harvards have been rowing boat races ever since 1852, which is longer than any other American colleges have engaged in sports competition. Tomorrow they will meet for the seventy-ninth time, over the down-stream 4-mile course on the Thames River, and the form chart says Harvard will win again.

This will give the Crimson the edge in the series, 40 to 39, and, more important, will make it six straight that Harvard has whipped the Elis. Tonight there were the usual rumors that, if his boat loses tomorrow, Yale Coach Ed Leader will be asked to run—not walk—to the nearest exit.

But Leader has become pretty much of a fixture at Yale and it must be remembered that successful crews seem to come in cycles. Yale had great ones of its own when Leader first came East from Washington, and even with the four straight losses to Harvard crews coached by Tom Bolles his 18-year record still stands at 9 and 9.

Leader Taciturn

Leader, as usual, was saying nothing on boat race eve, monosyllables being the equivalent of after-dinner speeches for the Eli mentor. Bolles was a bit more talkative, hardly venturing that his crew, Eastern sprint champion, would win the distance event, but conceding that it is better than last year's which whipped Yale by eight lengths, and perhaps as good as the one of 1938, which was stroked by the one and only Spike Chace.

Any augury which the short-end Yales might have sought to derive from this evening's combination, or substitute, race had to be an unpleasant one. Harvard, beaten a quarter length at the getaway, caught the Elis in the first half mile and went on to win the 2-mile race by a length and three-quarters in 11 minutes 5 seconds. Yale's time was 11:12.1.

Thus the Crimson oarsmen were one-quarter of the way to their fourth consecutive clean sweep of the river. The next two races are the 2-mile freshman and junior varsity, to be rowed upstream tomorrow morning at 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) and 10 a. m., respectively. The varsity 4-mile duel will start at 6 p. m.

Toledo Again Signs Pitcher Bud Parmelee

Toledo, Ontario, June 13 (AP).—Leroy (Bud) Parmelee, pitcher who began his baseball career with the Toledo Mud Hens, signed with the team again today. Parmelee's career took him to New York and St. Louis in the National League, and Columbus, Minneapolis and Louisville in the A. A. He recently was made a free agent by the Pacific Coast League.

D.C. Golf Ranks Combine Today In Benefit Play

In one grand and concerted effort to give as much aid as possible to the British War Relief fund the golf clubs of Washington and vicinity, both private and public, today stage tournaments with the larger portion of their membership expected to enter.

The general rule will be a $2 entry fee, with each player receiving a golf ball before he starts. Most clubs have also arranged for additional prizes for the winners, though in no case will prizes correspond in value to the $2 entry charge.

Thus the great part of receipts will be turned over to the Relief Fund. With 18 or more clubs contributing to the total a huge "pot" is anticipated.

Indians Prove Best Mudders, Scalp Reds, 2 to 1

Cooperstown Exhibition Proves Just That and All Have Big Time

By the Associated Press

Cooperstown, N. Y., June 13.—The nearest thing to a game for fun that two major league clubs have played since Abner Doubleday invented baseball in this placid little town 102 years ago was reeled off in the rain and mud today with the Cleveland Indians beating the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, 2 to 1, in six innings.

The skies were forbidding even when the two teams arrived here in automobiles early this morning and half an hour before game time a heavy shower shoaked the field and hundreds of fans who had gathered from all round the countryside for their annual look at the stars of the sport.

Everybody Has Big Time

The field would have been considered unplayable in the big leagues, but in order not to disappoint the estimated 5,000 fans who huddled in the little confines of Doubleday Field, Managers Bill McKechnie of the Reds and Roger Peckinpaugh of the Indians went on with the show.

The ball was slippery and the field precarious, so the players took everything easy, even to chasing and petting a couple of stray dogs which romped just back of the infield at intervals throughout the contest.

The Indians scored a run in the first inning. Russell Peters drove a liner into left field that went for a ground rule double, Ken Keltner singled him to third and he came home as Gee Walker grounded into a double play.

Their other run came in the third when, after two were out, Shortstop Eddie Joost made a two-base overthrow to first on Peters' roller and Monte Pearson, pitching for the Reds, did the same on a bounce by Keltner.

Players Slip and Slide To a Happy Ending; 2 Dogs Add to the Comedy

The Reds put together singles by Ernie Koy, Bob Mattick and Pearson for their only run in thethird frame as Cal Dorsett pitched five-hit ball over the abbreviated distance. Jim Turner relieved Pearson for the Reds in the sixth and allowed no hits.

The slow footing allowed the teams to entertain the throng with six double plays.

Western Lands 3 on Post All-Metropolitan Schoolboy Nine

Public Highs Command All Nine Spots

Eastern, Runner-up To Western, Gets Two Berths; Team Is Well Balanced

By Bill Burnett

Though individual players of 19 teams in and near Washington were considered, the seven District public school clubs whtich competed in the recent interhigh series account for every member of The Washington Post's All-Metropolitan Schoolboy Baseball Team of 1941.

Western, quite fittingly after its capture of the interhigh crown, is awarded three places on the mythical nine. Eastern, runner-up for the third straight year, gets two as do Central and Tech, and Anacostia gets one.

One odd item in the selection is the fact that only two stars, Bob Leach of Western and Sam Di Blasi of Central, staged "repeat performances." The husky pair, at first and third base, respectively, are the only 1940 choices to make this year's team. "Shanty" Shepherd of Washington-Lee, catcher, and Outfielder Les Wicklein of Roosevelt, both first team All-Metropolitan players last year, dropped back to the second team this season.

The Pitchers

Picked as All-Metropolitan pitchers are Charley Hines, the ace of Western's mound staff, and Tech's big Buddy Webb, both right-handers. Hines was credited with only three victories and as many losses during the season, but his capable relief work saved numerous games for the Raiders. Last Monday's championship game with Eastern was the most important.

Webb, probably the smartest pitcher in the city, was given preference over W.-L.'s Rube McNab and Wilson's Nino Birscuso because of his hitting ability. A 230-pounder, Webb's batwork was only slightly less effective than his burning fast ball and control. McNab wound up the season with a sizable batting average also, but his was achieved against slightly less potent competition.

Grabbing Shepherd's place behind the plate is Zello Lagos, the peppery Central catcher who stepped into Harry Martin's shoes this year. Strictly on catching ability he had no peer around town, and his heavy slugging brought his average well over the .300 mark. Shepherd had a better stick average but couldn't compare on the basis of receiving.

Slugging Infield

Around the infield a slugger is at every position, with the possible exception of shortstop. Every choice, however, stands out on his defensive play. Shortstop Martin Green, of Tech, was a distinct threat at bat, but hardly as much as several other players. In fielding, however, Green was the only dependable performer in schoolboy ranks. He had less errors than any other shortstop and turned in more brilliant plays.

Bob Nolte, at second base, was one of the big reasons why Anacostia did as well as it did this year. The chunky star's hitting and fielding made local observers almost forget Pat Fenlon, last year's unanimous selection at second. That Leach and Di Blasi were the best at their positions was higly evident to anyone who compared their play to others during the season. Elmer Leukhardt, Anacostia first sacker, again ran a close second to Leach but missed out on his hitting.

The All-Metropolitan outfield is anybody's dream of a trio of heavy hitters with sufficient defensive strength. Jimmy Karas, of Western, batted nearly .400 and Billy Hite and Jack Hoffman of Eastern pressed the .500 mark. The timely punch of all three figured in their team's march to the interhigh play-off series. Each was versatile as well. Karas played both third base and right field for the Raiders; Hite at one time or another was at second, short and center field; and Hoffman was shunted from first base to the outfield throughout this season and last.

Babe Phelps Says 'Misery' Has Him; Boss Seeks a Deal

By International News Service

New York, June 13.—The Brooklyn Dodgers slapped a $500 fine and indefinite suspension on Catcher "Babe" Phelps tonight for failing to accompany his teammates to St. Louis without permission or sufficient cause.

Indicating that both he and Manager Leo Durocher are disgusted with Phelps' behavior, Larry MacPhail, president of the Dodgers, said:

"We'd like to trade him, but first we have to get somebody willing to take him, and that might be quite a job."

Babe said he missed the train because he was ill.

"I've had the misery in my chest all spring," Phelps said. "And I've had bad pains in my head, too. I packed my bags and was ready to leave when I got to feeling worse and couldn't make it. I tried to call MacPhail and the Brooklyn office, but nobody answered."

Hex Day Finds Too Many Cooks At Edgemoor—All Is Confusion

Players Get the Old On-Again-Off Again From Officials; Johnson, Leavens Win

By Jack Munhall

Forestalled in one way when early rains stopped in time to have permitted play in late afternoon, the Friday the Thirteenth hex took another form yesterday and further disrupted the schedule in the City of Washington men's tennis tournament at Edgemoor Club.

And, as the result of too many officials dispatching conflicting weather bulletins to the players, only one of the four scheduled matches was held. In that, second-seeded Don Leavens and Davie Johnsen outclassed Eddie Miller and Doyle Royal, the University of Maryland youngsters, 6—1, 6—2, to gain the doubles semifinals.

Off-Again-On-Again

Chief victim of too many cooks spoiling the tennis broth was husky Charley Channing, the eighth seeded player, for a semifinals berth. Channing called the Edgemoor Club and was informed the match would be played. He showed up punctually at the appointed hour of 5 p. m. Meantime another official had called Murphy and told him the match would be held over until today.

So for some 55 minutes Channing fretted and cooled his heels and a gallery of about 50 awaited the arrival of Murphy, which, they had been told by still another committeeman, was imminent. Murphy actually arrived about 6—quite by accident—and was distraught to learn that Channing had been awaiting him so long. So to his nearby home Murphy rushed, hopped into his white duds and came puffing back, eager for the fray.

But by this time fast-approaching darkness had prompted Channing to request a postponement until today and that finally was decided upon. How most of the principals for the scheduled three doubles matches were prevented from appearing is not so clear-cut but again there was more evidence for the long-standing suspicion that tennis tournaments, like track meets, have an overabundance of officials.

What's Due Today

Today's schedule calls for six matches. Channing and Murphy are to play at 2; at 2:30 there will be a semifinals encounter between Hugh Lynch and Leavens, and at 4:30 will be held the second semifinals involving Barney Welsh and the Channing-Murphy winner.

In quarter-finals doubles, Austin Rice and Bill Toppock are slated to play Tom Mangan and Murphy at 5, and Welsh and Lynch will meet Ed Mather and Bill Breese at 6. At 5, also, Channing and Willis will battle Leavens and Johnsen for the first finals berth in doubles.

In the singles, Murphy will be favored to defeat Channing and lose to Welsh, and Leavens will be the choice to beat Lynch easily, thus setting the stage for a finals match Sunday between Welsh, the defending champion, and Leavens, the second-seeded newcomer, who is given a strong chance to upset Barney.

3 D. C. Pros Seek Berths In PGA Meet

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jun 13.—Approximately 20 pros are expected to compete here Monday for three berths allotted the Middle Atlantic district in the National Professional Golfers' Association Tournament.

The national event will be played in Denver and since so few Virginia, Maryland and District of Columbia pros can make such a long trip at the height of their club seansons, the entry list is smaller than usual.

Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Virginia Open champion, and Wiffy Cox, Washington veteran, are among those who will compete in the 36-hole qualifying event over the Lakeside course.

Others who have sent in entry slips include Errie Ball, Charlottesville; Johnny Bass, Baltimore; Rut Coffey, Hagerstown, Md.; Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, Md.; Gene Larkin, Woodmont, Md.; Johnny Kelly, Ocean View, and Darrell Napier, Petersburg.

Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond pro who has figured prominently in several P. G. A. tourneys, had a previous engagement to play in an Ohio event and will not compete here. His assistant, Johnny O'Donnel, former Maryland Open champion, will be kept on the sidelines by injuries received in an automobile accident.

Some of the pros are expected to play practice rounds at Lakeside Sunday. The qualifying round will start at 9:30 a. m. Monday.

Before the excitement died away Looter was given the reserve ribbon and Rider Shirley Payne (no relation to Mathematician's trainer) took him from the ring. Judges of the class were Manly Caster, Orange, Va.; Carl Furr, Mountville Va., and Arthur White, Middleburg, Va.

Although Mr. and Mrs. Greenhalgh could not see their pet youngster take the tricolor, they still marked up an enviable day as three of their hunter string, Looter, Traumertan and Port o' War, placed one-three-four in the 3-year-old hunters' class, with only Spanish Spear causing an interruption to the Springsbury march when he took second place. Shirley Payne rode the trio.

Woodrock Wins

Mrs. Thomas Davis' Woodrock romped off with the coveted Founders Cup, a replica of the trophies given when the show began in 1853. Fred Embrey rode the gray gelding, who triumphed over Pine Brook Farm's O'Doc. June Hanes' Siren, and Dr. Cary D. Langhorne's Happy Chance.

Among the handicap hunters, Capt. J. G. Manniece, jr.'s Trail Bird repeated his Millwood victory of last week by taking the blue ribbon over Horace Moffett's Real Jeans, Deborah Rood's Carrighater, and Marbert Farm's Red Water.

Today's session of the show featuring lead-in classes for thoroughbred stock and the hunter championship, will begin at 9:45 a. m. with thoroughbred brood mares and continue throughout the day.

400 Fans Wait in Vain as Pastor Fails to Appear for Ring Drill

New York Heavyweight 'Trained Too Fine,' Says Manager; Another Workout Set Today

Bob Pastor, outstanding New York challenger for the heavyweight championship, yesterday crossed up some 400 boxing fans at Turner's Arena.

Johnston said that Bob was trained down to a razor edge as a result of outdoor drilling at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., indoors at Stillman's gym.

As a result of the unexpected switch in training plans, Pastor will not wind up training until tomorrow. Ordinarily he would end his drills today.

Today's public workouts at the Arena will find Scott drilling at 1 p. m., with Pastor taking over an hour later. Italo Colonello, giant Italian heavyweight, a stablemate of Pastor, will be on hand to drill with the New Yorker.

Freddie Brown, Pastor's trainer, says that Bob will come into the ring Monday night weighing around 187 pounds. Scott expects to hit about 188, the heaviest Buddy ever his weighed.

With Trainer Harry Raskin exhorting him, Scott whipped through three fast rounds in a sparring session with Joe Hill, colored scrapper. And then Buddy blithely skipped rope, punched the hard bag for six more rounds.

Promoter Joe Turner pointed out that the Monday card is significant in that three local heavyweights—for the first time in history—are fighting. Scott is one; Jimmy McChard, Golden Gloves product will meet Colonello in a six-rounder and Jabo Kenner, the colored ace, will fight Joe Moniez, of New York, in a six.

N. Y. Women Win Over Phila. Golfers

Rye, N. Y., June 13 (AP).—New York's representatives barely nosed out Philadelphia today to win the intercity women's team golf matches at the Westchester Country Club and retain possession of the Griscom Cup.

The victors shaded Philadelphia, 6-5, but trounced Boston, 9-2, to score a total of 15 points. The Quaker City forces also ran up a total of 15 points, whipping the delegates from the Hub, 10-1. Despite the identical totals, the trophy was awarded to New York by virtue of its conquests of both Philadelphia and Boston.

The title was not decided until the final threesome had reported. Miss Kay Byrne of New York tripping Mrs. Samuel Byrd, of Philadelphia, 1 up, in 19 holes, to register the point that clinched the match.

Zivic-Davis Bout Postponed 6 Days

New York, June 13 (AP).—The return bout of Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic and Al (Bummy) Davis was postponed tonight from June 25 until July 1 because Promoter Mike Jacobs regarded the original date as too close to Wednesday night's fracas between Joe Louis and Billy Conn.

The postponement was made with the sanction of United States Army officials, who granted Davis an additional week's furlough from Camp Hulon, Tex.

No More Playing In a Downpour, P.G.A. Tells Pros

By the Associated Press

Girard, Ohio, June 13.—Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, announced today that the association had adopted a rule authorizing golfers to stop play during thunderstorms.

"The decision will be left entirely up to the players themselves," Corcoran said. "When thunder or lightning starts they will be within the regulations to stop play and seek shelter."

Previously linksmen in P. G. A. sponsored tournaments were bound to continue play regardless of the weather, unless officials at the scene deemed conditions too bad.

Corcoran halted play for a half hour today in the $5,000 Mahoning Valley Open.

Small, Naiman Nines Meet In City League Tomorrow

With only a few games remaining on the first-half schedule of the National City "A" League, all eyes are being turned on the Frank Small Motors nine, which tomorrow faces Naiman Photos in a high spot of the 12-game card in three sections.

Only the Motormen, now in third place, are conceded the chance of stopping Miller Furniture's first-half championship march. They meet Miller next Sunday in a postponed game, and on the outcome of that tangle hinges the title. The Heurich Brewers, in second place, can improve their standing not at all unless Small comes through with Miller's first setback in six games.

Conn Gains Support as Fight Crowd Converges on New York

Louis Still Choice for Title Bout

Odds Drop to 2½-1 On Champ to Win Wednesday Night; $400,000 Gate Seen

By the Associated Press

New York, June 13.—The vanguard of the army that always moves in for a heavyweight title spectacle began to pitch its tents along Broadway today, bringing along an astonishing show of support for Billy Conn's challenge to Joe Louis' reign as head man.

Not since Max Schmeling was polishing up his right hand for a second shot at the Bomber have the older hands of the fight game, the "brains" of beak-bashing, given another fighter a look-in to even muss Joe's hair. This time, however, they're split almost even-up over the Pittsburgh glamour boy's possibilities.

The result is, the Forty-ninth Street betting marts have shaved the price on Louis down to 1 to 2½, and the commissioners are warning it may go as low as 1 to 2 by the time the greatest heavyweight since Dempsey and the "abdicated" light-heavyweight king climb into the ring at the Polo Grounds next Wednesday night.

Conn Gains Favor

Last December, when this match was first made, the "experts" gave it plenty of laughs. They couldn't see how a youngster who couldn't scale 180 pounds in his overcoat stood a chance against the Bomber's heavy-duty cannon. Yet, a quick poll today showed more than a third of the available boxing writers picking Billy boy to "do the impossible." Jim Braddock already has gone on record for the good little man against the good big man. Tom Gallery, the Los Angeles promoter, hit town today and announced he was playing a hunch on Conn.

Rain washed both the fighters indoors today for their sharpening up work, although each announced he was as "right" as he'll ever be. Louis plans to continue sparring sessions right through Monday in the toughest training siege he has ever put in for an opponent.

The Bomber not only has a powerful amount of pride in his title—he wants to retire undefeated next fall to enlist in the Army—but starting with Wednesday's expected gate, he has a set of bouts in front of him in the next three or four months which figure to make any bank account healthy.

May Gross $400,000

Up to this minute, Joe has taken $1,833,079.46 from the cash customers with his fists in 53 fights in the eight years since he first collected $50 for stopping Jack Kraken.

Wednesday's fight figures to play to a gate of $400,000 or so, into which Joe will cut for about $136,000 or possibly enough to bring his earnings over the $2,000,000 mark. After that, there's a rematch with ample Abraham Simon, a shot with Lou Nova, which should have the box office singing another merry song, and a return go with Buddy Baer.

So hard has Louis worked, he expects to scale no more than 200 for Conn. This would be his lightest in his last six fights. Worryin' Johnny Ray, Conn's manager, doesn't want his gladiator to go over 180. He feels any more of a load would tend to cut down Billy's speed. And, after all, this tea party is strictly a question of a heavy cannon and a fast-firing machine gun.

Easiest Task for a Champion—Posing Like One

Below—Considered the best of Brookmeade Farm's yearling colts, this youngster refused to pose until his neighbor in an adjoining stall was brought out to stand nearby. He is by High Quest, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan's stallion now in Kentucky. Right—"He poses just like his grandfather, Fair Play," said the stable manager as Psychic Bid stood like a champion for this picture. The only stallion now at Brookmeade, he will be joined next week by Mrs. Sloan's Okapi

Bridle Trails Horse Show Set for Sunday

The first in a series of two horse shows sponsored by the Washington Bridle Trails Association will be held on the Rock Creek Park equitation field tomorrow morning, beginning at 10 a. m.

Classes will be divided between privately owned and riding academy mounts, and ribbons won in the opening show will count toward a cumulative award in the final session. Events are limited to association members.

The program consists of outings for privately owned bridle trail jumpers over six 3½-foot jumps; riding academy hacks, judged on performance manners, suitability as a riding school mount; riding academy jumpers, over 3-foot fences; privately owned hacks, to be ridden by owners or members of owners' families, and open jumping, judged as a knockdown-and-out.

No admissions or entry fees will be charged.

North Carolinian Gets First Sailfish

Special Dispatch to The Post

Raleigh, N. C., June 13.—Roy E. Lennon, of Bladenboro, N. C., was credited with the first sailfish catch of the season in the northern Atlantic coast today when he pulled a 6-foot-9, 52-pound specimen from the ocean off Southport. He was fishing off the boat of Capt. Victor Lance.

Best catch for the day was reported by a Fredericksburg (Va.) party headed by Judge Henry Dannehl. A total of 191 blues were taken.

Feller Gives $1,000 Yearly To Aid Boys

By the Associated Press

Cooperstown, N. Y., June 13.—Bob Feller at the age of 22 has become a philanthropist he admitted today and will spend $1,000 a year on four college scholarships for worthy boys.

The plan already is in operation but the modest young star of the Cleveland Indians kept his benevolence under cover until today when reporters cornered him to inquire about reports that had come from Iowa.

"Yes, I've got one boy at Morningside College in Sioux City now," the wonder pitcher said, "and I am going to start another each year until I have four there."

Feller, a farm boy from Van Meter, Iowa, who never went to college himself but earns in excess of $30,000 annually, explained that he worked out the plan last winter with President Earl Roadman of Morningside.

"I went there once last fall to appear between halves at a football game and Mr. Roadman gave me a check. I met him several other times during the winter and we got our heads together on the idea and worked out a plan where I would provide $250 a year for the support of each of four boys for four years at college.

"Each boy will be picked on scholarship, athletic ability, character and financial need. We have a committee of the president, the State superintendent of schools and myself."

Asked how long he expected to continue the scholarships, Feller replied, "As long as my dough holds out."

Revamped Nats Will Try Again

The shuffled and reshuffled Nats will be given one more riffle today by Manager Bucky Harris when they return to Griffith Stadium to open a stand against the Western clubs.

Buddy Lewis, who has been shuttling back and forth between the outfield and the infield all season, will be restored to third base today in the newest desperate move to do something about the Washington ball club.

To make room for Lewis at third base, Cecil Travis is being moved back to the shortstop job he has been playing off and on since the start of the season. Replacing Lewis in the outfield will be Johnny Welaj. He will not play Lewis' right field, however. Welaj will move into left, and George Case will be posted in right field.

It all recalls the crack of one Washington player who recently remarked that "on this club I need a compass to find the way to my position from day to day."

The scheme of Harris' latest move is an attempt to bolster the Nats' infield defense which has been ragged, particularly on double plays, although Lewis has never been acclaimed as a fielding wonder at third base. At shortstop, however, Travis may start some of the double plays that weren't being started.

The shuffled line-up does not promise to add much to the Nats' batting attack. Welaj, who gets an outfield job, has been hitting a mere .150 or thereabouts, and with Case hitting .234 the Nats' outfield attack is not exactly awe-inspiring.

In an attempt to break a two-game losing streak, Harris today will send Steve Sundra to the mound. Sundra has won only one of his last four starts and was knocked out of the box the last time he faced the Tigers who, incidentally, have been the only club the Nats could lick with any consistency. Five times in seven games this season Washington has beaten the Tigers.

200 to Enter North-South Skeet Shoot

The eighth annual North-South Skeet Shooting Championships open today and continue through tomorrow at the National Capital Club on Bradley Boulevard. Advance entries indicate a field of about 200. This form of shooting, incidentally, has been adopted at all Army and Navy Air Stations for training in aerial gunnery and also is considered excellent training for shooting parachute troopers.

Six events are listed on the program. Today's card will open with the junior championship and continue with the ladies and the 410 and 20 gauge championships. The individual all-bore championship and the five-man team title will be decided Sunday.

The junior championship contest is expected to be wide open since little is known of the ability of most of the contestants because of their youth and limited experience. Larry Williams, jr., who won the title five of the six years he competed is ineligible, having passed his eighteenth birthday.

The team champion tomorrow is slated to be a duel between Hill Top Club of Baltimore and National Capital Club of this city, with the Jacksonville, Fla., Club a dark horse. George Deyoe, of Washington, D. C., is conceded a good chance to repeat his 1938 victory in the individual all-bore event in which no champion ever retained his title. Other strong contenders for this crown include Dick Shaughnessy, of Boston, present national champion; Rufe Watson, of Laurel, Md.; Lewis Hutchinson, of Greenwich, N. Y., and Frank Kelly, of East Orange, N. J.

Colts at Mrs. Sloan's Farm Have 1 Duty—Look Handsome

Brookmeade Youngsters Don't Linger There; It's Off to Races for Them; Filly Looks Smart

(This is the second of a series of 12 articles by Anne Hagner on prominent horse breeding farms in this area. The third, concerning Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Springsbury Farm, will appear tomorrow.—Editor.)

By Anne Hagner

When colts are sent to horse shows from Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan's Brookmeade Farm at Upperville, Va., they have only one job—to look as handsome as possible. No one requires them to jump fences or go quietly at a walk, trot and canter; they simply stand.

The reason for this show ring inactivity is that Brookmeade colts don't stay around Upperville very long. They are sent off to the races when they become 2-year-olds, but their brief flings in lead in classes frequently turn out successfully.

The current season is a particularly bright one for the stable manager and his staff on Mrs. Sloan's lovely farm—brightest, in fact, in the past four years. Brookmeade has a filly, and the folks around the hunt country will tell you that she is the smartest looking young one in northern Virginia. The truth of the statement will be partially proved on the Upperville show grounds today, but even if she loses, the wiseacres predict that she is due to have a brilliant future.

Aaron Omer, soft-spoken Kentuckian who handles the farm, is practically a rail-bird outside the stall of this bay daughter of Brookmeade's stallion, Psychic Bid. Overflowing with quality and substance, she captures the eye of any horse lover, and Omer regards her as the top of the filly world.

Out of Chicotta, she is a half-sister to the good 3-year-old, Mettlesome, winner of the Experimental Handicap at Jamaica early this year.

Of nearly identical color and build as the filly is a bay colt by another Brookmeade sire, High Quest, now standing in Kentucky. He is considered the best of the colts, but definitely plays second fiddle to the favored lady of the barn. Incidentally, his mother, The Damsel, is a half-sister to Psychic Bid, keeping the bloodlines securely in the family.

Quite Photogenic, Too

From the extensive yearling stables, which house 27 horses, but are only half filled at the moment, Omer leads visitors to the picturesque stallion barn a few hundred yards away. There, in a tremendous sunlighted stall, is Psychic Bid, chestnut 9-year-old by Chance Play, who won more than $58,000 in his 10 races before being retired to stud duties in 1937.

A gorgeous golden chestnut, Psychic Bid is the most photographed animal on Brookmeade's 500 acres when visitors come to see the establishment. Around his stable he is as quiet as a pet hunter, but Omer reports that it is quite a different story when he is taken out every morning for a five-mile workout.

"He's really something to ride, isn't he, Leonard?" Omer laughs, and the groom's quick nod is adequate proof of Psychic Bid's bucking prowess.

The big chestnut's racing record is not as impressive as those of High Quest or Cavalcade, who died last year after contracting shipping fever en route to Kentucky from Virginia. Psychic Bid won the Hopeful, Laurel and Sanford Stakes and the Scarsdale, Fall River and Weybosset Handicaps; was second in the National Stallion Stakes and the Paumonok Handicap; and third in the Preakness.

His get have been almost uniformly high-class and are currently winning in the show ring and on the track, although the first crop is made up of 4-year-olds. Among the runners are Down Six, Ready, Psychology, Big Stakes, Bidder and Chic Mary, all 2-and 3-year-olds.

Although glimpses of the horses are naturally the object of most pilgrimages to Brookmeade, a non-horsey guest would take equal delight in the surroundings. Mrs. Sloan's big colonial house, surrounded with trees and flowers, overlooks acres of her own green meadows and miles of the Old Dominion.

Midget Auto Race Seats Go on Sale

Popularly priced seats, offering an excellent view from any point of the stadium, will be made available today for the big-time midget automobile races to be introduced at the new West Lanham (Md.) Speedway Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Secretary Harry Whelan last night announced that tickets priced at 55 cents, 75 cents and $1.10 are to go on sale at the Standard Capitol Servicenter, between Second and Third on Constitution Avenue, this morning at 9 o'clock.

Permanent grandstand, bleacher and trackside seats, Whelan revealed, will accommodate 8,500 persons and standing room for 3,500 more will be available.

Woodmont Golfers To Engage Woodholme

Woodmont will meet Woodholme, of Baltimore, here tomorrow in an intra-city club golf match at 1 p. m. Male club members not on the team can tee off any time before 1 o'clock, and men and women players after 4:45 p. m.

Next week Woodmont will meet the Lakeside Country Club at Richmond Saturday and Sunday in the renewal of an old rivalry.

Game Wanted

The Brookland Merchants unlimited nine is seeking a game tomorrow with a fully uniformed club. Challengers should call Taylor 7174.

Merchants League Games Rained Out

Both games of a Merchants Night League softball double-header scheduled to be played at Ballston Stadium last night were postponed on account of wet grounds. The Senate Beer-Adam Hats game and the I. B. M.-Plaza Wine & Liquor tilt will be played at a later date. Meanwhile league officials announced yesterday that Abe Rosenfield, Senate's pitching ace, will be lost to the league leaders for at least ten days because of severe ankle injury received in the Baltimore game last Wednesday night. Play in the league will be resumed next Monday night with another double-header on tap.

Poor, Old Chisox? Phooey; How About Our Brave Nats!!

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 13.—Chicago's White Sox, whose record of only five victories in their last 13 games has dropped them to a fourth place tie in the American League, entrained for the East today in a decidedly Friday the thirteenth mood.

They still were bemoaning last night's 3-2 extra-inning loss to the New York Yankees when Charles Comiskey, son of the late owner, appeared to accompany the team on its road trip, which opens at Boston tomorrow. It was recalled his uniform was numbered 13. Then the Sox train backed in on track No. 13.

The Sox themselves have scored exactly 13 runs in their last five games—and lost four of them.

Wagner's round included a three-over-par 7 on the tenth hole where he banged two out of bounds, but the former Johns Hopkins student made up for it with a birdie-barrage from 12 through 16, four out of six birdies from putts of 20, 10 and 2 feet and a chip shot in the cup on 14.

Volunteer State Fans Honor George Archie This Afternoon

'Tennessee Day' At Stadium Brings Archie Into Spot

First Baseman George Archie will be the central figure in "Tennessee Day" ceremonies at Griffith Stadium this afternoon.

Tennesseeans of Washington who will gather at the stadium to pay homage to native-son Archie will see him presented with the Sporting News Trophy in token of his selection as the Pacific Coast League's most valuable player of 1940.

Senator Thomas Stewart, of Tennessee, will make the presentation. The trophy, donated by Publisher A. G. Taylor Spink of the Sporting News, is a massive baseball statuette.

Bought by the Nats after the close of the Pacific Coast League, where he had starred with the pennant-winning Seattle club, Archie has been dividing the first-base job with Mickey Vernon of the Nats. He won the Coast League's most valuable award with a sensational batting record that included a .322 average. He played in the most games, hit the most doubles, 47, and drove in 102 runs. He was third in run-scoring.

Meeting Planned To Organize D. C. Junior Pin Loop

A special committee appointed by Ed Schlegel, president, Washington Bowling Alley Operators Association, will meet Monday at noon at Brookland Recreation to discuss plans for forming a Junior District Bowling league to get under way this fall.

The new loop will be patterned after the Men's District League and will be sponsored by the operators of the Metropolitan Washington area, the only difference being that the youthful loop will be composed of boys whose ages designate them as juniors as set down by the N. D. P. B. C. rules. Boys chosen as members of the various teams will be recognized as the most expert youthful bowlers of the city.

At least 12 teams are available at the present time and it is not unlikely that 16 will start the season about September 15.

Tyr Takes Early Command to Win Feature at Charles Town

Brookie Boy Is Beaten 2 Lengths

Victor Brings Home A $10.40 Ticket on Slow Track; Hot Man Takes Show Spoils

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 13.—Taking command in the opening quarter, Mrs. M. McNey's Tyr held the lead thereafter to win the Carlyle Johnson Purse, the best offering on the Friday the thirteenth program. The 7-year-old son of Mars and Myth made it three victories at the meeting by holding a two-length advantage over Mrs. E. R. Routt's Brookie Boy at the end of the test of a mile and a sixteenth. Two and a half lengths farther back came Mrs. W. Anderson's Hot Man, the favorite in the field of six and ridden by Jockey Sammy Palumbo, who received his daily booing from the public choice backers.

Winner Pays $10.40

With the bulk of the wagering going to Hot Man, Tyr paid a $10.40 mutuel. Jockey R. Haber rode the veteran gelding over the course in time of 1.55 3-5, more than 10 seconds over the track record. The running surface was drying out, but was heavy and sticky throughout the program.

Jungle Moon held the lead early with Tyr always close up. Entering the backstretch Tyr took command and drew out. From that point to the wire, Brookie Boy was the chief contender, but he was not good enough. Palumbo seemed to get all the run he could out of Hot Man and did not deserve the reception he got when he came back to weigh out.

The favorite players stepped on the right foot when Jimjofor proved an easy winner in the first race. The son of Brilliant drew out in the stretch run to finish with plenty of daylight ahead of Lady Devie and Clifton's Dawn. Jimjofor was a $4.60 shot.

$42.20 Daily Double

A goodly portion of the daily double players collected $42.20 for each $2 investment. D. J. Sullivan's Broomoria was the winner of the second race at a $5 mutuel. Dressmaker was second ahead of Lula Khayyam. The stewards suspended Jockey A. F. Martinez, who rode Golden Dial, for five days for interfering with Lula Khayyam.

C. W. Davis' Storminess proved a worthy paddock tip in the third event. The son of Purchase went to the front early and had no catcher in the field, finishing in advance of Lena Girl and Caidon, the last named the favorite. Storminess paid a $10.80 mutuel.

The 8-year-old Chief Hollis upset the dope in the fourth race. With Jockey R. Heber doing the riding, Chief Hollis stuck to his running guns long enough to beat Blox. He paid $17.80.

BROOMORIA, allowed to settle into her stride, worked her way to contention on the outside, responded gamely when shaken up and was drawing out at the close. DRESSMAKER, sluggish early, closed a gap. LULA KHAYYAM set the pace on the inside of GOLDEN DIAL, was taken up and came to the outside to regain command and then faltered. GOLDEN DIAL forced the pace under hustling tactics, got to the front and weakened suddenly.

STEALING HOME was taken up going to the first turn and tired in the final quarter.

Daily Double, BROOMORIA and STORMINES paid $42.20.

Dear Al:

Racing Secretary Freddie Burton has arranged a good card for today. The Alexandria Handicap drew 10 starters, including seven horses which have been winners at the meeting. In addition, a field of 10 was named for the Berryville Purse. Both races are sprints. The day's best distance event is the seventh in which Flag Etta will match strides with Yankee Lad and five others. There's a newcomer to the ranks of women trainers here. Mrs. V. T. Carter has taken out a license to condition her Lady Timarole and Lapis. She is a Baltimorean. With Russell Oakes still on the sick list, Bill Paulsgrove and Walter Haight will air today's feature over a hook-up including WINX in Washington, starting at 4:45 p. m. It is alleged that I carried off first honors in the eating race at the church dinner here. At least I was presented with a can of beans as a prize. If I don't start picking more winners I'll have to be heating them up. Former Jockey Carl Hanford is stepping along in excellent style in his role of trainer. He has saddled seven horses at the meeting and five have been winners. What kind of a ride was that G. Acosta gave Lula Khayyam yesterday? He looked like he was rounding up cattle. The first case of a member of the Horsemen's Guild being aided by the organization turned up here this week. Frank Noe's Weboing died of a neck ailment and the guild arranged to have him take over Tom Lewis' Goodwine. Lead Please has been added to Starter Morrissey's schooling list. Arthur Hullcoat has shipped Stephen Jay to his Arlington, Md., farm where he will be turned out. Steeplechase Jockey William Poland, of Purcellville, Va., has returned East after riding at Agua Caliente. He has been working horses here for the past few days. Poland plans to go to Delaware and will ride jumpers for Miss Judy Johnson. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—HIBLAZE is consistent and is capable of carrying high weight. Breaks off the rail in this and should make every post a winning one. OWALLER gets 8 pounds from the top one and is dangerous. SAIL BY is in light enough to be a threat.

Second race—SCHLEY GOREE promises to have the right race track today and the right distance. Looks like a set of brackets for the veteran. EXHORT is better suited at this route and is dangerous. DONA MONTEZ belongs in the pay circle.

Third race—Nijinsky is the class of this field and promises to run a fine race. I'm going to string along. TAUT is always a factor and belongs close. CHIEF CHEROKEE surprised last out and is a threat.

Fourth race—FUSIONETTE was off poorly last out and closed boldly. This one may take the measure of the highly regarded BALLYHAUNIS, BUTCHER BOY is a hard-running plater and belongs in the first flight in this field.

Fifth race—The Waple entry of J. HAL and BEEWYN will have to be caught. Of course, the emphasis is on the first named. BLABLAH will have going that suits. VENDOR'S LIEN was never sharper than at present.

Sixth race—RED IDOL left nothing to be desired in that last. If he can beat this gang to the first turn it will be all over but the pay-off. PURPORT'S last was promising and the plater is in light. GARDEN POOL for the show end.

Seventh race—FLAG ETTA is favored by the modest assignment in this distance affair. YANKEE LAD won far out recently and is the one to beat. BRAZEN HUSSY appears overmatched but should be third.

Eighth race—SEA FINN gets a good post position and has shown enough to warrant top pick in this field. CANHOCK breaks off the rail and is dangerous. KISSEM made a good move last out and is a threat.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take HAPPY HOSTESS, GAY PRANK and COUNSELLO.

Metal Shortage Slows Output Of Brass Firms

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., June 13.—Executives of Connecticut brass factories working on defense orders reported today that the amount of available metal was lagging behind expanded production needs, and in some instances brief shutdowns had been necessary.

Assistant Secretary Rodney Chase, of the Chase Brass & Copper Co. of Waterbury, home of some of the largest brass mills in the United States, said:

"The fact of the matter is that there simply isn't enough copper to go around. We don't feel it much more acutely one day than the next. It's just a general condition."

Another Waterbury brass executive, President Ralph L. French of the Plume and Atwood Manufacturing Co. said work at his plant had been held up to a "limited extent." He said, however, his company had been able thus far to "squeeze through" on its production schedule.

In Bridgeport, also a brass center, one official reported that the amount of brass was adequate for the industry's normal needs, "but it can be said the expansion and demands upon the industry are for the time being far in excess of foundry production."

Men in the industry said the need for more metal became apparent in Connecticut factories immediately after copper and zinc were put on a priority basis by the Federal Government.

Security Offerings Up Slightly in Week

New York, June 13 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities picked up a bit during the week ended yesterday, but no sizable volume of corporate financing developed. Total offerings, reported today by Standard & Poor's Corporation, amounted to $47,958,153, compared with $30,623,400 the previous week.

Only corporate new capital financing of importance was done by the railroads, which raised about $17,000,000 of new cash. The roads have been taking new money quite steadily for several weeks for the purchase of new rolling equipment.

Retail Price Index Gains More Rapidly

New York, June 13 (AP).—Retail prices showed a more rapid uptrend in May, rising eight-tenths of 1 per cent, according to the Fairchild Publications retail price index. The index, which includes most types of general retail store merchandise except foods, stood at 96.3 on June 1, a gain of 3.8 per cent from a year ago but still three-tenths of 1 per cent below the high point of 1937.

Fairchild Publications said the rise in prices last month was broad, including most of the items making up the index. The publication pointed out that retail quotations were beginning to reflect recent mark-ups in wholesale prices.

Job Applicants Soar, Placements Set Record

Richmond, Va., June 13 (AP).—Jobseekers registered with the Unemployment Compensation Commission in May rose sharply to 69,849—the highest total since August, 1939—while placements by the State employment service reached the record-breaking figure of 11,919, Chairman Edwin S. Reid of the UCC announced.

Although positions filled by the employment division in May totaled almost 1,000 more than the previous monthly record set in April, the 7,969 placements of men showed a drop from the April figure. Placements of women registrants, however, increased sharply over the previous month to 3,950.

Sugar Agreement With Cuba Is Signed

Havana, June 13 (AP).—The final document by which the Export-Import Bank finances 400,000 tons of Cuban sugar, worth $11,027,000, was signed today in a ceremony at the Presidential palace.

Signers were President Fulgencio Batista; Warren L. Pierson, president of the bank; Premier Carlos Saladrigas; Jose M. Cortina, minister of state; Domingo Morales Del Castillo, minister of the treasury, and representatives of the Sugar Institute and the Sugar Mill Owners Association.

Ambassador George S. Messersmith, of the United States, attended the ceremony.

Crop Damage Reports Spur Wheat Upturn

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 13.—Wheat prices rallied more than 2 cents a bushel from early lows in the final hour today as buying expanded sharply on the stimulus of Southwestern crop-damage reports, further harvest-belt rains and forecast of more and outstanding strength of soybeans.

After dipping to 99⅝, lowest in about a week, July wheat steadied and recovered fractionally at times. Afternoon buying increased substantially and the price went to $1.02⅛. Closing figures were 1⅛-1½ cents higher than yesterday, July $1.02-1.02⅛, September $1.03⅛-⅜.

Soybeans finished 2½-3 higher; corn ¼-½ higher, July 73¼-¾, September 75⅛-⅜; oats unchanged to ¼ up; rye ¼ off to 1 higher and lard 7-10 higher.

Part of the wheat upturn was associated by sharp gains in the soybean pit, with prices up about 5 cents from early lows following announcement that the Government will support beans around $1. The method for this support was not disclosed, but the announcement said the purpose was to increase production for oil. Bean futures sold up to near $1.40 for July delivery, about 2 cents below the season's peak established late in May, but 55 cents over the low point several months ago.

Refined Copper Supply Slumps At End of May

New York, June 13 (AP).—Domestic stocks of refined copper at the end of May reached the lowest ebb in a number of years, according to statistics released by the trade today.

From April the supply declined 3,221 tons to total 95,568 tons May 31. The April figure was 98,789 tons.

Blister stocks increased 902 tons in May, making the net decrease in supplies of copper above ground 2,319 tons.

Domestic copper shipments in May were 92,611 tons, 11,889 tons more than April deliveries of 80,722 tons.

Another new top in copper statistics was made in the delivery of 49,190 tons of Latin American metal to this country. That represented a gain of 6,332 tons over the April amount.

Endicott-Johnson Gives 5% Wage Increase

Binghamton, N. Y., June 13 (AP).—Endicott-Johnson Corporation, shoe manufacturer, announced today a 5 per cent increase for 20,000 employes amounting to $1,250,000 annually, effective Monday, the third similar rise since November.

The latest increase will bring the company's pay roll equal to the highest in history, officials said.

A bulletin to the workers signed by George W. Johnson, president, and George F. Johnson, jr., vice president and general manager, said "tanneries and factories are running full" and forecast "business will be good for some time to come."

Stocks React Mildly on Profit Taking; Oils and Utilities Contest General Trend

New York, June 13.—The stock market suffered a mild relapse today, its second since the recovery swing got under way June 2. While scattered strong spots of recent sessions conceded 1 to 2 points, leaders generally restricted declines to fractions, and a few oils, utilities and specialties managed to contest the trend with fair-sized advances.

The reversal was attributed mainly to some cashing of profits on the lengthy bulge and lightening of commitments as protection against possible bad news over the week-end.

Sentiment remained more bullish than otherwise, brokers said, because of the stronger stand of the Administration on defense strikes and further evidence that business momentum was increasing as armaments spending assumed huge proportions. War developments appeared to have been a negligible factor.

Attempts to extend the upturn met opposition at the start and minus signs were well in the majority from then on. A little support came in just before the close and extreme losses were reduced in many cases. Dealings dwindled on the retreat.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .3 of a point at 41.5. Transfers totaled 443,320 shares compared with 561,320 yesterday.

Stocks breasting the current for new 1941 highs included Western Union and Postal Telegraph preferred, which evidently attracted a following on the revival of reports Congress might approve the long-desired merger. Others in new high ground were Standard Oil (N. J.), Phillips Petroleum and Armour preferred.

Chrysler was off 1⅛ and General Motors unchanged as Price Administrator Henderson requested the motor makers to rescind recently boosted automobile prices as a step in restraining inflationary tendencies. While this week's motor car production made a new top since May, 1937, expectations of sharply curtailed output of 1942 models was a handicap for these stocks.

On the losing end were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, du Pont, Allied Chemical, General Steel Castings preferred, J. I. Case, Kennecott, Anaconda, American Telephone, N. Y. Central and Allied Chemical.

Tilting forward in a spotty Curb were Columbia Oil & Gas, Creole Petroleum, Pantepec and Sherwin Williams. Lower were American Gas, Brewster Aero, Bel Aircraft and Pennroad. Turnover here was around 89,000 shares versus 76,000 Thursday.

The bond market suffered a mild case of indecision today and, except for a few rails and utilities, prices showed little variation. Japanese issues were strong for the second day in a row.

Turnover dwindled to $5,593,900, par value, compared with $6,703,000 yesterday. The major groups in the Associated Press averages showed only negligible changes where any occurred at all.

The let-down in activity was generally regarded in bond circles as precautionary after a fairly consistent advances most of the week, with a balky stock market helping the tendency.

Word from Washington that the way had been paved for Pennsylvania Railroad to acquire control of the Wabash brought a fair demand for bonds of the latter which sent several issues up 1 to 2 points. Other firm spots included International Hydro Electric 6s at 38¾, Laclede Gas 6s at 71¼, United States Steel 2.20s of '50 at 102¼, and Canadian Pacific 4½s at 85¼.

Closing within fractions either way of the previous day's finals were Western Union 5s, Texas Corporation 3s, Missouri Pacific 5s, St. Paul 5s, Erie 5s, and Santa Fe 4s.

United State Governments moved narrowly both on the stock exchange and over the counter but the undertone was steady in both markets.

Japanese, 5½s closed up 3 at 63 and the 6½s added 1½ at 70. Other foreign issues were quiet.

New York Cotton

New York, June 13 (AP).—Cotton futures today showed a new burst of strength in late dealings, closing 12 to 15 points higher. The January and May deliveries reached the highest levels since early 1937 and other deliveries came back to within a few points of recent tops.

Heavy trade buying was associated with activity in cotton textiles. Turnover in print and broadcloths was calculated at around 6,000,000 yards, a considerable gain from yesterday, but on the week the business was estimated at more than 200 per cent of production. Again a characteristic of the market was a pronounced scarcity of supplies for nearby shipment.

Exports yesterday, 6,581 bales; season so far, 985,200. Port receipts, 18,292. Port stocks, 3,284,170.

Building Permits Show $378,000 Gain

One hundred and twenty-five building permits have been issued for the Eastern Suburban area of Montgomery County, Md., involving $895,160 worth of construction, last month Martin Iverson, building inspector for the county, announced yesterday.

This shows a gain of $378,000 over April and approximately $414,000 more building than in May, 1940, Iverson said. Since January 1 construction is $580,000 ahead of June, 1940.

Retail Sales Increase 7% During Week

The Federal Reserve Board estimates that department store sales in the week ended June 7 were 7 per cent higher than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended May 31 sales had been 21 per cent above last year and in the four weeks ended June 7 they averaged 14 per cent greater than in the similar period of 1940.

By Federal Reserve districts, increases in sales last week over last year included: Philadelphia 4, Cleveland 10, Richmond 3, Atlanta 20, Chicago 3, St. Louis 15, Kansas City 9, Dallas 24, and San Francisco 20 per cent.

In the Boston district, sales were 2 per cent under last year, and in the New York district they were even with last year.

Dwindling Supplies Noted

New York, June 13 (AP).—Buying in retail stores continued apace this week, and sales averaged 15 to 18 per cent above last year for the country as a whole, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

"Retail selling was strong over a broad range of merchandise," the credit agency said.

"Especially noted by retailers were tendencies to purchase in the higher-price brackets and to buy more in clothing lines," the agency added.

There was no let-up in interest in automobiles and electrical appliances, but, it was pointed out, sales in some centers were running slower because of declining supplies.

Outstanding "volume sellers" in many stores were graduation and bridal wear, sportswear, dresses, pastel topcoats, luggage, silverware and other wedding and graduation gifts, tubular steel chairs, shower curtains and ruffled curtains.

New England retail sales topped a year ago by 19 to 22 per cent, East 16 to 23, Middle West and South 18 to 25 each, Southwest 20 to 26, Northwest 11 to 15, and Pacific Coast 14 to 17.

Further wholesale price advances reported during the week, said the credit concern, included: Full-fashioned silk hosiery, 5 to 6 per cent; low-end blankets, 12 to 17 per cent; overalls, effective September 1, 50 to 75 cents a dozen; fiber and sisal rugs, 5 to 7 per cent; cotton rugs, 10 per cent, and some air-conditioning room coolers, $5 to $10 per model.

Masonite to Expand Wood Fiber Plant

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Masonite Corporation officials announced today more than $1,500,000 is being expended for expansion and improvements in its plant at Laurel, Miss., to speed up wood fiber board production.

The largest item is $800,000 for a steam turbine power plant which will go into service about mid-August, which, officials said, will provide "considerable relief" for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The new plant will supply nearly 13,500 kilowatts of power. More than $600,000 also is being expended for construction.

U. S. Acts to Boost Soybean Output

By the Associated Press

To prevent undue depletion of vegetable-oil stocks and to insure ample supplies for defense as well as normal needs, the Agriculture Department yesterday made changes in its crop-control program designed to encourage greater production of soybeans for oil.

Planting restrictions on soybeans as a soil-depleting crop were revised to permit farmers to increase their production this year without loss of any Government benefit payments. The department said it would "utilize its available resources" to support prices at about $1 a bushel.

Officials pointed out that imports of some fats and oils had been interrupted due to war conditions. Under this circumstance, they said, some increase in domestic production of fats and oils may be necessary to prevent shortages.

SEC Launches Hearing On Chicago Mart's Plea

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Public hearing before a Securities and Exchange Commission trial examiner began today on applications of the Chicago Stock Exchange to extend unlisted trading privileges to 20 stocks. No objectors to the applications appeared at the hearing.

The Philadelphia and Baltimore exchanges acknowledged receipt of notices sent by the commission announcing the hearing, but waived objections to the plan. The Pittsburgh exchange asked for copies of the applications. Six other exchanges including the New York Stock Exchange, made no response.

If the commission approves the applications, the number of stocks traded in the exchange's optional odd-lot system will be increased from 73 to 93.

Auto Output Ranks Second Only to 1929

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor.

Detroit June 13.—When the motorcar industry ends its present model year, it will be able to count 1941 as its second largest production year and biggest of all sales years.

This is the view of leading trade authorities who have kept a careful check on output since last October when the present model period began. These observers say production will reach fully 5,200,000 units by July 31, when the current model period ends. This would be second to only the 5,600,000 units of 1929.

Unlike 1929, however, the entire output will have been sold by the time the assembly plants switch over to new designs. Also unlike that year of wild production, the industry expects still to have a backlog of unsatisfied demand. In 1929 overproduction was so heavy it took many months after new models were on sale to clean up the surplus.

Some Abatement Seen

None of the sales executives expects the current demand for new cars to continue unabated through the remainder of the present calendar year but they do expect a heavy accumulation of orders for the initial weeks of the new model season.

Most sales managers agree that much of the present buying is being borrowed from next year's normal market but they explain that they have no way of knowing what should be next year's "normal" volume. Fears of soaring prices with the advent of the 1942 models and uncertainty on the part of car buyers as to the industry's ability to build automobiles "as good or better" with the use of numerous substitute materials is responsible in considerable degree for the unprecedented retail demand, the trade experts say.

There was consideration of further price increases but not as great as many car buyers feared. At the same time, however, talk was heard in trade quarters that a "freezing" of retail prices on order of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Control was a distinct possibility, a step toward which was last night's request by Price Administrator Leon Henderson that five companies withdraw recently announced increases.

The car engineers are emphatic in their assertions that the 1942 model will be fully as sturdy, comfortable and eye-appealing as any ever made. There probably is considerably more than wishful thinking in these assertions, too, according to the trade observers, who point out that no individual manufacturer can afford to market an automobile of inferior quality next year without paying heavily for the experiment in a loss of prestige and customer confidence.

Week's Output at 134,682

Detroit, June 13 (AP).—Passenger car and truck production this week will total 134,682 units for the highest single week's volume since May 15, 1937, according to Ward's Automotive Reports.

Assemblies last week numbered 133,645; a year ago this week they totaled 93,635.

The survey said that heavy demand from the field, together with increasing Government requirements, was responsible for maintaining the present high production level. It added that "little change in pace is expected until the end of current passenger car models."

Timken Expansion To Cost $6,000,000

Canton, Ohio, June 13 (AP).—The Timken Roller Bearing Co., busy on defense work, today disclosed additional Ohio projects which will boost its expansion program to around $6,000,000. Previously the company had announced expenditures of $3,000,000 for improvements.

Probably you've been reading those crytic little ads in the papers these last few days asking you to volunteer at your neighborhood school for home defense work.

Thousands of Washington men and women have already done so we hear—the women for the most part signifying they are willing to do any clerical work necessary, the men, by and large, showing that they are still boys at heart by volunteering for police and firemen's jobs.

This voluntary registration is going on throughout the country and creating all sorts of interest. Which is why the whole subject of Civilian Defense has been chosen as the topic for tonight's "Report to the Nation" over WJSV at 5 p. m.

The dramatic network program, done by Washington actors and actresses, is going into full and dramatic detail on exactly how the country is being organized, how civilians are being placed into regular divisions, complete with units for air raid spotters, volunteer incendiary bomb fighters and what have you, how cities will be evacuated in case of emergency, how air raid shelters will be maintained and how debris would be cleared from roadways. All that sort of thing, which sounds pretty dramatic you must admit.

The script is being written by Richard Hippleheuser, CBS's popular director. Brewster Morgan, will produce the show. John Charles Daly and Albert Warner serve as the narrators.

Contract Bridge

A player who persists in bidding his own suit all the way from one to four must be rather sure of his ability to play the hand when he has finally won the contract. Cecil Head, Yale College Club star, may be an aggressive, determined bidder, but his skill at manipulating the cards fully justifies his optimism.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

	Head ♠AQJ7432 ♡J5 ◇Q5 ♣K9
Dreyfus ♠K86 ♡963 ◇J1097 ♣4	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	Hymes ♠9 ♡KQ104 ◇K432 ♣AQJ2
	Churchill ♠105 ♡A872 ◇A6 ♣10843
♣75

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Dble	2♣	Pass
2♠	Pass	3♡	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K♡.

He played today's hand during a national championship. His partner was C. Garton Churchill, who has some original bidding theories himself; his adversaries were Jack Dreyfus and Edward Hymes jr. It was one of Cecil's simpler deals; yet in order to develop the game-going trick he had to establish an end play on East. The King of hearts was opened and taken by the ace. The ten of spades slipped through the king successfully and the jack and ace finished the outstanding trumps. Now, all but one of the remaining spades were run off, Cecil discarding clubs from dummy and Hymes trying valiantly to throw declarer off the impending end play by false carding in his discard of the queen and a low club along with two diamonds and a heart. This was the situation:

	♠Q ♡J ◇Q9 ♣K
♠None ♡9 ◇J109 ♣75	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠None ♡Q10 ◇K4 ♣AJ
	♠None ♡872 ◇A6 ♣10

On the lead of the hearts jack East was "fixed." Three tricks out of the six were the best he could do, letting Head make four spades.

Magnesium Expansion Is Assured

The Office of Production Management has completed arrangements to secure an expansion of magnesium production more than 13 times the present capacity, it was learned yesterday.

Although an official announcement declared that the OPM was only recommending enlargement of present facilities, it was known that plans are far advanced to have about seven manufacturers, financed in part from Defense Plant Corporation funds, enter into field.

Present production of the vital defense metal, essential for airplane parts and incendiary bombs, is now at the rate of about 30,000,000 pounds a year. Additions to plants already scheduled or under construction will bring the total capacity to about 75,000,000 pounds annually by the end of this year, it was announced. The ultimate goal, however, which is expected to be reached by the end of 1942, was set at 400,000,000 pounds annually.

Tremendous Increase

Reason for the enormous enlargement drive, it was stated, lies in "tremendously increased requirements for aircraft and other military uses, arising out of the expanded national defense and Lend-Lease programs."

At present, the principal magnesium producer is the Dow Chemical Co. Under construction, near Palo Alto, Calif., is a plant of the Permanente Corporation, an enterprise of Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast industrialist.

Other developments yesterday on the economic defense front:

1. In a drive to extend subcontracting in order to speed up defense deliveries, the OPM Defense Contract Service, headed by Robert L. Mehornay, summoned field officers here for a three-day "clinic" on June 16, 17 and 18.

2. The OPM announced the resignation of Gano Dunn, special consultant to the materials branch, who has made two studies on steel capacity for President Roosevelt. Dunn, who has served in the OPM for a year, resigned to return to his position as president of the J. G. White Engineering Corporation, it was stated. Dunn was also reported yesterday as about to undergo a minor surgical operation.

Price Raises Opposed

3. Price Administrator Leon Henderson reinforced with a letter his telegram of Thursday to five auto manufacturers asking that they withdraw recently announced price increases. Henderson also requested industrial concerns to talk with the Office of Price Administration "before taking the initiative on price increases."

Henderson declared that price advances in the auto industry are not justified "when profit levels are favorable, even though costs have advanced."

He also flatly warned that "no increases will be permitted when they merely anticipate as yet unrealized cost advances."

Former Radio Executive Asks Probe of FCC

By the Associated Press

Mark Ethridge told a Senate committee yesterday that the radio broadcasting industry was willing to "risk life or death" in a broad Congressional investigation of the Federal Communications Commission and its proposed new rules for chain broadcasting.

Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Times, is a former president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

In indorsing a Congressional investigation of the FCC, he told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee that he "knew" of three instances where the agency had violated its own principles in behalf of "friends of this Administration."

The three instances, he said, involved radio stations at Houston, Tex., in which Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce and Federal Loan administrator, was interested; a clear-channel grant for a Boston radio station, and what he called the "Winston-Salem" case.

Senator Tobey (Republican), New Hampshire, immediately demanded that Ethridge present all details and facts on these cases and other matters of "political pull," but the witness insisted that the Senate committee should order an inquiry.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said he agreed with Ethridge, other witnesses, and Senators on the committee that present radio laws should be revamped but questioned the wisdom of delaying the FCC chain broadcasting regulations meanwhile.

Wheeler said it was wrong for Congress to set up an agency to control the railroads, radio or any other field and then hold up the agency's regulations because the industry protested.

Ethridge testified that this was one of the few times when an industry had come to Congress and requested an investigation while the Federal agency, set up to control it, opposed such action.

Ethridge said he did not believe there "was any corruption involved" in the Houston radio case but added that the stations were owned by Jones or newspapers in which the Cabinet member was interested. Ethridge said two of these stations were granted increases in power by the FCC after that agency had ordered an inquiry into newspaper ownership and operation of broadcasting stations.

Earlier, Senators Wheeler, Tobey and Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, had protested that most of the "so-called commentators" on national networks had presented only the arguments of those who favored entering the present war.

This brought a prompt offer of time to present the other side from Presidents Niles Trammell, of the National Broadcasting Co., and William S. Paley, of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

D. C. to Send 2 To Defense Training Class

Two representatives of Washington's police and fire departments will participate in the first training course at a newly established school at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., where they will be taught methods of fighting incendiary and high explosive bombs and poison gas, it was announced yesterday by the Office of Civilian Defense.

The school, the creation of which was made public yesterday by Mayor H. F. LaGuardia, OCD director, will give two weeks' training course, beginning June 30. The first session will be attended by selected police and firemen from 40 key cities on the Eastern seaboard, including Baltimore and Norfolk, in addition to Washington.

The men who have received training are expected to return to their respective communities and teach other members of their departments the civilian defense methods they have learned.

The courses of instruction will be given by regular officers of the Chemical Warfare Service and will include all phases of combatting bombs and study of the effects of various kinds of gas, it was announced.

Selectees Must Fix Home Address

Men registering on July 1 under Selective Service were reminded yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District draft chief, of their right under new regulations to choose their residence address when they pass their time in more than one place.

Once the designation of residence is made, however, it will determine the local board's jurisdiction permanently, although a mailing address may be changed if necessary.

The new regulation is intended to remove confusion which existed during the first draft registration in assigning registrants with two addresses to local boards.

Glass to 'Go Along' on Time Extension of Power to Devaluate Dollar

By the Associated Press

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, said yesterday that while heretofore he had opposed extension of the President's power to devalue the dollar he now was disposed to "go along" in the President's request for a continuance of this authority until June 30, 1943.

"I voted and spoke against it," Glass told colleagues on the Senate Banking Committee, adding that "while I don't believe in it, I feel disposed to go along with those who have been in intimate touch with these matters."

Glass made the statement after Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, had challenger a recommendation by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that Congress enact speedily a House-approved bill continuing the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and the President's authority to lower the gold content of the dollar.

Adams said he favored continued operation of the stabilization fund but believed the power to devalue the dollar was an "overhanging danger" to the stabilization of international exchange.

Morgenthau told the committee that he was "quite sure" Government expenditures would be increased over previous estimates, adding that a deficit of from 10 to 12 billion dollars was possible in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

He made this statement in agreeing with Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, that a close check could be maintained against the dangers of inflation inherent in increasing defense expenditures.
